THE DEAD WILL NUMBER 35,000

Awful Total of the Massacre of Christians

BY THE FANATICS IN ADANA PROVINCE

New Sultan Proposes To Run the Ottoman Empire Upon an Economic Plan—Dismisses Useless Palace Officials and Hangers-On. Refugees from the Districts Where Massacres Occur Swamp Missions.

Mersina, April 29.—The Christian village of Bakdjeh has been completely destroyed by the Mohammedan mobs. The inhabitants are almost wholly Armenian and only those who fled in the early stages of the fighting escaped with their lives. The torch was then applied to the town and scarcely a building remains. Messages today from Hadjin say the situation there is desperate and that no relief is in sight. The Christians of the town, including the foreign missionaries, are besieged and have only enough food to last a day or two.

The murders throughout the province of Adana since the trouble started are placed at 35,000. Local troops are aiding the rioters and no relief can be had until an invading army comes from European Turkey. The authorities throughout all of Asiatic Turkey have shown themselves in complete sympathy with the massacre.

Policy of Economy.

Constantinople, April 29.—Sultan Mehmed V inaugurated a sweeping policy of economy today by cutting off scores of attaches from the palace civil list and removing hundreds of supernumeraries from the various government departments.

The Yildiz Kiosk now has a force of attendants about the size of that maintained at the White House in Washington.

All told, several thousands have been let out of their soft jobs and a saving to the government of millions of dollars effected. This sign of a business administration—something new in Turkey—is received with almost universal approval.

There is the highest authority today for the statement that the Young Turks intend eventually to court-martial Abdul Hamid, the deposed sultan. If this is done, his execution is probable, as the Young Turks would hardly care to take this action unless they had sufficient evidence to insure Abdul's conviction on some penal offense.

Swarming to Mission.

London, April 29.—A despatch today from Antioch in the Aleppo province of Asiatic Turkey, says that a countless multitude of widows and orphans, victims of the massacres throughout Asia Minor, are swarming toward the mission. Many of them are horribly wounded and are begging for food and shelter. Their condition could not be more pitiable.

The missionaries are doing their best to relieve the situation, but are hopelessly swamped by the heavy influx. Thousands in Asia Minor who escaped the massacres are doomed to die of starvation and sickness unless prompt aid is rendered. There is little prospect of relief arriving in time.

The refugees are from scores of different towns and they say that hardly a Christian family has escaped without the loss of one or more members, while in hundreds of cases, whole families have been butchered.

Massacres are still sweeping to the east and north, the authorities aiding the Mohammedans in their atrocities.

A TRAIN DITCHED AND SCORE HURT

Springfield, Mass., April 29.—Train No. 46 on the Boston and Albany railroad, which left Springfield for Boston at 7:50 this morning, was ditched at about half a mile west of Palmer Station shortly after 8 o'clock. No one was killed, twenty were injured, many of them seriously. Seven cars were thrown from the rails. A broken rail was the cause of the accident. The passengers were badly shaken up.

HE IS TOUCHED FOR VALUABLES

New York, April 29.—A man who says he is John G. Hayes, forty-four, superintendent of the People's Coal company, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, and resides at No. 141 east Eighteenth street, that city, is at Bellevue hospital today suffering from an assault. He told the hospital attendants that he had been "blackjacked" and robbed of a diamond ring, watch and chain and $50 in cash. The ring and watch were valued at $800, he says. When Hayes was first discovered in an areaway it was believed he was fatally injured. The physicians said today, however, that he would recover.

THIRTY JUNIORS ARE SUSPENDED

For Nailing Colors to Flagstaff at Bedford.

Bedford, Ind., April 29.—With thirty of the boy members of the junior class suspended for having nailed their class colors to the top of the High school flagstaff, the girl members of the class have come to school wearing long streamers of the class colors and announcing their intention of going on strike unless the boys are reinstated. After the juniors had nailed their flag at the top of the pole, they smeared the latter with tar so that their emblem could not be reached by the rival class.

Benson Not Guilty.

Washington, April 29.—John A. Benson, the millionaire land operator of California, charged with bribery of employes of the general land office, found not guilty.

GREAT STORM SWEEPS LAND

Extends from Nebraska East to Pennsylvania.

IS MOST SEVERE IN MIDDLE WEST

High Winds, Heavy Rains, Hail and Some Snow.

In Many Localities There Are Also Electrical Displays — Man Dies from Fright in Kansas—Several Injured—Damage Done by Hail Stones Eight Inches in Circumference—Train Is Snowbound.

Chicago, April 29.—High winds, heavy rains, hail, snow and electrical disturbances prevailed early today over a territory as far west as Nebraska and east into Pennsylvania. The Middle West suffered the most severely.

Douglas, Kansas, was hit by a tornado that killed one person and injured several more, killed stock and blew down four school-houses. At Tupela, Oklahoma, a tornado wrecked a number of buildings last night and devastated orchards.

Wisconsin and Michigan report heavy snows. A train was stalled in a drift near Oshkosh, Wisconsin. Snow and hail fell early today in Iowa and western Pennsylvania. Cleveland reports a hail storm at 5:30 that played havoc among the fruit trees.

The storm traveled rapidly eastward. For three hours this morning it treated Chicago to rain, hail and snow and a brilliant display of lightning. Several buildings, including the Illinois Central elevator, were struck.

No Deaths Outside Kansas.

No deaths have been reported thus far outside the path of the Kansas tornado.

Reports from Omaha say a thirty-minute hail storm early today did considerable damage. Some of the stones measured six to eight inches in circumference.

Students at Bellevue college, south of Omaha, took refuge in cellars when they saw the big black cloud coming. Several buildings were blown down at Brule, Nebraska.

The tornado passed through the southern part of Butler county, Kansas, demolishing many farm houses and destroying ten residences in the southeast part of Douglas. Louis Ayers, seventy, was so frightened that he died from heart disease a few minutes after the storm had passed. Mrs. J. J. Jones was severely injured. Two farmers are reported seriously hurt.

LITTLE SPRING DOES BUSINESS

Beats the Government Out of Sugar Duties.

AMOUNT SAID TO RUN OVER MILLION

In Any Event Sugar Company Pays Million.

The Outlook Magazine Explains How the Manipulation of a Small Spring Enables a Subsidiary of the Sugar Trust To Shortweight the Government to the Extent of 75,000,000 Pounds.

New York, April 29.—"The American Sugar Refining company of New York—a subsidiary company of the American Sugar Refining company of New Jersey—has been for at least the greater part of the last decade engaged in smuggling sugar by the daily use of a fraudulent device," declares the Outlook today, "and from 1901 to 1907 seventy-five million pounds of sugar were smuggled, on which the unpaid duties amounted to a million and a quarter of dollars. The government is also claiming that it was defrauded of duties on shipments of sugar reaching back as far as 1897 at two Brooklyn refineries and also at Jersey City and will try to collect duties thereon.

Following what is characterized as a "painstaking and careful investigation" of the recent recovery by the government from the sugar company of more than a million dollars unpaid duties, turned over to the collector "under protest," the magazine today presents the result as the "case of the seventeen holes" and shows in detail how the alleged short weighing of the government was accomplished and its official weighers duped by a small spring, a wire and a hole bored through the corner of each of the seventeen official scales placed on the big sugar docks in Brooklyn.

Operation Is Explained.

After describing the manner in which the sugar is unloaded from the vessels and passed to the weighing-house it is explained that the government checker sits at the beam end of the scale and the yard employe at the other. The author, Harold J. Howland, then takes up the narrative of his experiences there.

"Taking the seat in the corner reserved for the company employe just by my left knee was a thick post supporting one end of the shelf beneath the scale bar. Under the shelf was a system of levers and joints which formed the connection between the registering beam and the rod leading to the platform outside. Between the post and the end wall of the scale house was a space perhaps a foot wide, as dark as a pocket. Running my hand down the post, I touched a thin strip of iron, its outer end bent into a ring. The strip worked loosely in a hole in the post, and, as I pushed it through, its inner end ran over a joint of the scale mechanism. The spring of the steel exerted force on the levers and made the registering beam drop. We found that a pressure of only one ounce at that point was good for a loss of forty-eight ounces on the platform of the scale.

Spring in Each.

"Regularly spaced around the dock stand are the seventeen scale houses and in each of these I found in the dark the post pierced with the hole. Some were worn more, some less; for not all of the scales have the same amount of use. In several instances the hole had worn so large that it had been filled in, in one case with putty, in another with tacks, still a third had a sliver of wood glued to it to make the hole smaller, all showing how long the doctored scales had been in use.

"In the summer of 1907 a man, named Richard Whalley, told in the treasury department in Washington that he had worked for the sugar company for years as a checker, and after the Dingley tariff bill went into effect he had, under the direction of the company's dock superintendent, used methods for lessening the apparent weight of sugar. Whalley was made a special employe and was sent to Brooklyn with a customs special agent, Richard Parr. Whalley obtained employment as a tally man and on November 19, 1907, he reported to Parr that, while he could not prove anything, he had discovered that whenever a draft of sugar was put upon the scales the company checker dropped his left hand in a peculiar way. Parr and an assistant watched and saw the same thing.

It Weighs More.

"They then stopped a draft as it was being taken from the scales, ran it into another scale house and weighed it themselves. It weighed fourteen pounds more than it had a moment before and another draft weighed eighteen.

"Parr ordered the company checker, Kehoe, to get up and sat down in his place. He found the spring with its curled handle wound with string as if to protect the fingers of anyone handling it. He did not take the spring out of the hole, but asked the checker what he knew about it. That individual professed the most complete ignorance of its existence, origin, purpose or history and showed no curiosity about it. In fact he even declined to look at the spring that was found or the hole. It was some little time afterward that the government officials got to the other scale houses that had been in use that day, but when they did they found the checkers had been relieved and, while the holes were there, no springs were to be found."

Ship bills of lading which were evidence in the government suit and statistics of various kinds are then cited at very great length to explain that only the government was defrauded by the false system of weighing. It is alleged that two sets of books, one showing what the government was paid duty on and the other what the consignee received, were kept and they were pasted back to back for purposes of reference. It is then stated that the company claims none of its responsible officials knew of fraudulent weighing and the article concludes:

THEY PLAN TO DO BEVERIDGE

Friends of Former Vice President Fairbanks

ARE VERY ACTIVE IN HIS BEHALF

Hope To Wrest State from the Senator.

The Result of the Election Last Fall Leaves Beveridge the Sole Dispenser of Public Jobs in Indiana. Hemenway and Watson Are the Main Cogs in the Fairbanks Machine—Both Have Grievances.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 29.—Friends of United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge have just learned of what they say is a well-laid plan to defeat Beveridge for reelection and in his stead return former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks to the senate.

The Beveridge and Fairbanks clans have been at swords' points for years and the Fairbanks forces feel that Beveridge is responsible for the election of a Democratic senator over Senator Hemenway and the defeat of ex-Congressman James E. Watson for the governorship. Hemenway and Watson are the main cogs in the Fairbanks machine.

Beveridge's friends discern a plan by Hemenway and Watson to get even. Watson has said he will take up the practice of law in South Bend, and, it is assumed, he will try to gather the remnants of the Fairbanks machine in the northern part of the state. Hemenway lives at Boonville, near Evansville, and his friends are almost exclusively in that district.

Meanwhile, with the work of reorganization in his behalf going on, Fairbanks is making a tour of the world which will delay his return to Indiana until after Beveridge's fate is settled.

ROBBED OF HAIR TWICE IN YEAR

Is a Pretty Young Maid of Mound City.

St. Louis, Mo., April 29.—For the second time within a year pretty Elizabeth Zabb, fourteen, has been robbed of her long golden hair. Early Wednesday morning a negress crept into her bedroom and while she was still asleep, cut off a braid eighteen inches long and made her escape. The other theft of her locks took place last October.

SHOOTS MAID; THEN HIMSELF

AT NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS

Had Been Lovers Until Last Christmas.

At That Time Miss Helen A. Marden, of Somerville, Massachusetts, Breaks Her Engagement with Porter Smith, of Chicago—He Broods Over the Matter—Calls Upon Her This Morning.

Northampton, Mass., April 29.—Helen A. Marden, of Somerville, Massachusetts, a member of the senior class of Smith college, was shot on the college campus this morning, by Porter Smith, of Chicago, a graduate of Dartmouth last year, who then shot himself and died instantly. Miss Marden died at the noon hour.

The bodies lay within four feet of each other when found.

Smith and Miss Marden became engaged last year, but at Christmas time, the engagement was broken off by the young woman, whose action appears to have been a severe blow to Smith, who made several attempts to renew the engagement and came again to this city two or three days ago for this purpose.

Calls on Victim.

This morning he called on her as she was starting from her home for chapel, and proposed that they again talk the matter over. The two walked about the lower campus, comparatively deserted at the time, engaged in earnest conversation. Smith is supposed to have made one final, desperate plea, and being repulsed drew a revolver and fired three shots into his companion and then turned the weapon on himself with fatal effect. He shot Miss Marden first in the temple and twice in the back. The college gardener, Canning, heard the first shot. He saw the couple standing close together and heard the girl scream after each of the first two shots, but at the third shot she fell and did not scream. Smith at once put the revolver to his temple and fired one shot, which caused almost instant death.

Sisters Live Together.

The girl had a sister, Louise Marden, in the junior class, and Smith also had a sister, Emily Smith, in the junior class and the sisters lived in the same house on the campus.

Smith had been in town two days, registering at the Draper hotel Tuesday night. He appeared cheerful. This morning he sat in the office, reading the papers, and chatted with the hotel employes, impressing them as one thoroughly in his right mind and in such a manner that it could hardly be believed he then had the deed planned, which must have been the case. He left the hotel about 8 o'clock evidently going to the college at once. Nobody was more surprised than the hotel employes who knew him when they learned of the tragedy.

FOUR MEN KILLED AND FOUR INJURED

As Result of Explosion in a Powder Factory.

Tamaqua, Pa., April 29.—Four men were killed and four badly hurt as the result of an explosion in the glycerine mixing house of the Potts Powder company at Reynolds, four miles south of here, today. Only portions of the bodies of the dead men have been found, but all of the injured will recover.

The dead are John Applegate, George Durst, I. M. Rumble and W. A. Stevens.

CRUISER NEW YORK TO GO TO TURKEY

The state departments will be closed during the hours of the funeral, and most of the state officials will be mourners at the bier of their departed associate.

The remains of Mr. Lewis arrived from Cleveland at 9:45 Wednesday evening, accompanied by the bereaved widow and only child, Mrs. Mary Lewis and Miss Irene Lewis.

Result of Old Feud.

Shawnee, Okla., April 29.—In a battle fought with Winchesters and shotguns loaded with buckshot at Asher today Stanley Ware was killed, Harry Brewer fatally wounded and Jesse Brewer severely injured. The battle was fought between members of the Ware and Brewster families, both of which are prominent. Trouble occurred between them two years ago.

Too Much Water.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 29.—Barney Keenan, arrested on a charge of intoxication, is dead in jail as a result of drinking too much water. Following his arrest, Wednesday, Keenan demanded that the police officials give him some whisky. This being refused, he drank four gallons of water and died of the effects.

Heir Expected Tonight.

The Hague, April 29.—The latest bulletin from the physicians in attendance upon Queen Wilhelmina says that an heir to the Dutch throne will probably be born tonight.

COSTLY BLAZE IN WINDY CITY

One Man Dead and Two Others Are Missing.

MONETARY LOSS IS CLOSE TO MILLION

Burning of "B" Elevator of the Illinois Central Railroad Is Spectacular in the Extreme — Firemen Fight Flames While a Terrific Electrical Storm Is Raging About Them—Many Explosions.

Chicago, April 29.—One fireman is dead, two persons are missing and six persons were seriously injured as the result of a fire today which destroyed elevator "B" of the Illinois Central railroad. The elevator is a total wreck and the loss is estimated at between $800,000 and $1,000,000.

The fire was spectacular in the extreme and the firemen fought it while a terrific electrical storm was raging around them.

The dead man is Lieutenant William McElligot.

The missing are Simon Cooper and a workman known as "Mike." The injured: Captain Kirwin, William O'Brien, John Ehrenburg, Benjamin Ramsey and Matthew Greer, all firemen, and John Bevans, a newspaper reporter. All of these men are seriously injured.

Supposedly from Lightning.

The fire began in the midst of an electrical storm and is supposed to have been started by a bolt of lightning. A fireboat was hastily despatched to the scene and later all the downtown engines responded.

Lieutenant McElligot headed a crew of firemen who started into the burning building with a line of hose. As soon as they stepped inside there was a terrific explosion of grain dust. McElligot was instantly killed and Simon Cooper disappeared. The others were all injured and were rescued by their comrades outside.

The explosion partly wrecked the elevator and the flames spread with astonishing rapidity. Inside of an hour the whole structure was a mass of flames. It was still burning at 4 a. m., though the firemen had succeeded in checking its spread to other elevators nearby. During the progress of the fire, there were a dozen more dust explosions, but no other injuries resulted.

Treasury Statement.

Washington, April 29.—Today's treasury statement: Receipts $2,125,991; disbursements $2,250,000.

TYPEWRITER OF CORRESPONDENT

NEW YORK WORLD MAN ACTIVE AGENT

In Driving Sixteen Battleships Off the Seas.

Holds That the Remodeling of the Sixteen Battleships, Which Make the World Trip, on Lines Which Experience Has Demonstrated Best Is an Admission That They Are Practically Worthless.

The navy department today announced that the sixteen battleships which made the trip around the world are to be remodeled, thus practically confirming the reports that have been current since the return of the fleet that the voyage practically wrecked the navy.

Since the return of the fleet it has been reported at various times that masts had been sprung, that plates were loosened, that the intricate electrical machinery, including the fire control, was hopelessly out of order and that other things had happened. Nevertheless, the navy department insists that the ships stood the voyage better than expected, which leaves to the imagination what the original expectation or fear had been.

Will Be Remodeled.

That sixteen battleships have been laid up for repairs and that sixteen battleships are to be remodeled are facts admitted by the navy department, and those facts seem to bear out the reports that the United States navy today is practically useless and out of commission.

If the plans of the navy department are carried out, it is proposed to go back to first principals. In other words, it is proposed to make of the sixteen battleships a type something like the old Monitor, save that the new type will have more free board. All the cumbersome superstructure which at present adorns the battleships and which affords a splendid mark to the enemy's guns, will be taken off.

All that will appear above decks will be a turret fore and aft and the funnels for the boilers and a wire "waste basket" type of mast, which will be used for the lookouts.

Same Old Criticism.

It is asserted by those who criticise the navy department that this remodeling is an admission that the armor belt on the battleships was misplaced. The innovation raises the armor belt to a point where it will become more effective, because taking off the superstructure will, it is calculated, raise the ships one foot higher in the water and consequently the armor belt will be in a desired position. The ships could not have been raised otherwise without danger of turning turtle or becoming unseaworthy.

The fighting masts are to be dispensed with. They have not only proved useless, but cumbersome and easily put out of commission. On the other hand, it has been proved that the wire basket type of mast is practically invulnerable and may be punctured many times without danger of collapse.

The Contradiction.

Washington, April 29.—In reply to criticisms of the battleships which are now undergoing alterations at the navy yards, Secretary Meyer reiterated today the statement that the fleet would be united again in June, in as good war condition as ever.

By that time the alterations decided upon some time ago, as a result of the fleet's trip around the world, will have been completed. Each battleship will have the two fire control masts of the waste-basket type, will be painted in war color, and will have the brass figure-heads removed.

The afterbridges will also have been taken off and part of the forward bridges, reducing the top hamper considerably. This reduction, however, will make less than an inch difference in the water line of the vessels.

The ships in their new dress, will be fully tested during the extensive maneuvers that are to be held this summer, to demonstrate the effectiveness of these changes.

One of the happy features of the day was a postcard shower given by the ladies of the Free Baptist church and others who could not be at the gathering

Mrs Everett contributed the following

Well my friends As I have left another mile stone of my life behind and have the pleasure of again meeting you on this occasion I surely ought to be thankful and do feel highly honored

The seasons come and go the spring time comes with its grass and budding flowers and green foliage with birds singing in the branches so happily But soon autumn comes creeping along and all too soon the flowers begin to wither the grass is touched with the cold breath of frost the trees having done their duty take on gold and purple preparing for the great change Soon comes December with cold storms and freezing nights and snow that covers all the beauties of the fall Yet these changes are so silent and so constant that we scarcely notice them and before we are aware the seasons are gone and we look back at the shortness of time

So it is with our lives youth middle age then the frost of winter of old age which creeps on so surely but so soon In looking back it seems but a few years when I at the age of eleven came with my parent from the state of New York and settled in Marion county in the fall of 18 4 My memory takes me back to those pioneer days and the hardships of seventy five years ago of sickness and death of burying a dear mother In those days of privation all dry goods were very high and no market near for produce Wheat had to be hauled to Sandusky City and brought but fifty cents a bushel it taking three days for the trip Every letter we sent to our friends cost twenty-five cents Such was some of my experience of the early days of my youth but then were happy schooldays never giving a thought that they were passing away never a thought that I could possibly get old Youth and pleasure with plenty of work I was always cheerful and happy But time went on I did not heed I would always be young of course and springtime of life was so sweet But school days passed and circumstances changed my course

I found myself settled in life with a small family yet not old No crow had done his work in my face For years I lived in the dear old homestead where for fifty six years I was a happy mother where love reigned and reigned But still put old age off I would not be called old woman for a long time but youth yielded to the ravages of time

I have lived to bury many friends and have many still living friends of other day which could name by the score Oh how I love to meet the dear old acquaintances in where we used to meet at church where the hand shaking and Christian fellowship made us light put these meetings of long ago are printed on memory's page and it was a sorrowful pleasant thought

Life has its beauties but time shrouds them Death's grave has honors are but the sunshine of a home its palace a but is gilded sepulchres Not so with eternity In the dwelling of the Almighty there be no footsteps of decay no darkness nor pain there in that beautiful home I soon expect to enter and claim the promise He that believeth on me shall have everlasting life

And now as I have lived and tried to do every known duty in living to make others happy and also aiming to do Gods will I am waiting to hear Thy will be done enter in to the glory of the Lord

HOLE IS NOT ANXIOUS TO RETURN TO MARION

THE SUPREME COURT TO DECIDE MATTER

Habeas Corpus Proceeding Lays and Hole's Attorney Carries the Matter to the Supreme Court—Sheriff Stahl Must Wait at Seattle Until Case Is Heard—A Telegram

Charles Hole the former local transfer agent of the Wells Fargo Company express at Seattle Washington on a charge of stealing a package containing $1 000 after eluding the authorities for nearly two years is fighting extradition This information was received in a telegram from Sheriff John C Stahl from Seattle to his deputy Cornelius Breen Friday April 23

Following is Stahl's telegram

Requisition papers honored habeas corpus filed out this morning but denied by the court Appeal taken by the defendant to supreme court

Saturday morning's mail brought a postcard from the sheriff who was at Olympia Monday stating that the governor was signing papers and that he would leave that evening for his prisoner at Seattle

While the Marion county sheriff was seeing the requisition papers honored by the governor in Washington's capital city however Hole attorneys had instituted habeas corpus proceedings to claim the prisoners freedom Sheriff Stahl telegram shows that Hole was denied his liberty and it is now up to the supreme court

EARL KRANER DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

TUBERCULOSIS IS CAUSE OF DEATH

The Young Man Travels Through a Number of Western States in Fruitless Endeavor To Regain Health. Is a Son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Kraner, of This City.

C. F. Kraner, of Olney avenue, received a telegram from San Jose, New Mexico, about 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, saying that his son, Earl, had died and that the remains will be brought to this city for interment. The message did not state the time of his death.

Mr. Kraner, had he lived until May 27, would have been twenty-nine years of age. He was born in Burlington, Iowa, but spent most of his boyhood days in this city. His death was caused by tuberculosis of which he had been a sufferer a number of years. He left Marion about eight years ago and traveled through California and other western states for a number of years in an endeavor to regain his health. He settled in San Jose several years ago, and was married at that place a year ago last July. About a week ago, his parents received word that his condition was very serious and his mother left immediately for San Jose. She was at his bedside at the time of his demise. Mr. Kraner intended leaving Saturday for the West, but received word not to come as he would be too late to see his son alive.

Mr. Kraner was a young man of excellent qualities and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. His early death, while expected, will come as a shock to his many friends and schoolmates in this city.

The deceased is survived by his widow, parents and one brother, Wells, now in the United States navy.

MAP AND SCENES AT NIAGARA FALLS, HELD IN CLUTCH OF GIANT ICE PACK

Two carloads of dynamite were exploded in the Niagara river to dislodge the greatest ice pack that has formed there within the memory of white men. Towns and villages, hotels and millions of dollars' worth of factory property were menaced by the flood caused by the accumulation of ice. The water has risen at Lewiston to within a few feet of the suspension bridge. At Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, near the mouth of the river, the water spread over the lowlands and threatened to sweep the countryside for a radius of a mile. The docks of the Niagara Navigation company have been destroyed. About half a mile of the Michigan Central tracks was covered with water. Further upstream the gorge road which skirts the American shore was obliterated. The great whirlpool rapids, which never before, so far as history records, submitted to the will of the ice, were dry. Sewage from Buffalo, Tonawanda and other places has accumulated to such an extent that it is a grave menace to health.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Marion Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Marion. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Mrs. James Lutz, 122 north Prospect street, Marion, Ohio, says: "I cannot find words to express my gratitude to Doan's Kidney Pills for the benefit they have brought me. For fifteen years I was a sufferer from kidney complaint and other troubles and during the past few years my kidneys became more badly disordered than ever. In April, 1908, I was taken with such a severe attack that I thought I would have to give up entirely. The pain over my right kidney was almost unbearable and I had headaches and dizzy spells. My feet and hands were badly swollen, my appetite was poor and my body became badly bloated. I had no energy or ambition and often a cold sweat would come over me. During this time I took medicines of various kinds, but I steadily grew worse and in three weeks I lost thirty pounds in weight. My flesh was soft and flabby and I became very much alarmed. I finally decided that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble and I had read so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I had a supply procured at Schmidt & Co.'s pharmacy. I did not notice much relief from the first box, but after I had used the second I began to improve and gradually the symptoms of my trouble were relieved. I have gained in weight, feel strong and am able to do my housework with ease. My only regret is that I did not learn of Doan's Kidney Pills years ago, for I know that they would have saved me much misery."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

PASTOR TO ASSIST YOUNG DAN CUPID

Will Furnish a Courtship Flat To Promote Matrimony.

Chicago, April 26.—A courtship flat, furnished with cozy corners, shaded lamps, a discreet chaperone, and all the other appurtenances necessary to correct love making, will be arranged here soon by Rev. Benjamin F. Aldrich, pastor of the Lincoln Park Congregational church, to promote matches between members of his congregation. Rev. Mr. Aldrich announced that the Lincoln Park Congregational and the Evanston Avenue Congregational churches have purchased property in the vicinity on which a church will be built to house both congregations. On the same lot is a two-story flat building. The upper story will be used as a parsonage and the lower flat will be devoted exclusively to the comforts of the young people of the church.

"It is natural that boys and girls should want to meet each other," said the minister. "It is part of the divine plan to court. Too frequently the matter is considered unworthy of serious attention. Matrimony is not a joke. The choosing of a life helpmate is a matter of study as well as love."

The courting flat will be furnished soon. The rooms will be separated by heavy tapestries and rich, flossy rugs to deaden sound. The minister proposes to instruct all chaperones as to when and where not to peek.

AMERICAN CAVIARE

Persons with epicurean tastes will be interested to know that the production of real Russian caviare is likely to be resumed at Philadelphia and other points along the Delaware river It may come as a shock to some of them to learn that the caviare sandwiches to which they have paid swollen prices in American restaurants originated as to their central ingredient in streams and lakes in this country where sturgeon do not abound The fact is not known however Nor could it be when it is recalled that the industry has been rather extensive in this country

In several of the western states a business is made of catching the sturgeon extracting the roe and shipping it to Russia where it is treated and exported to the United States ready for the table For many years this industry thrived at Sandusky Ohio the Lake Erie sturgeon having been supplied in thousands for the purpose Up to 1890 the Delaware river furnished large quantities of sturgeon roe for exportation But the fishermen virtually exterminated this species of fish in their greed and a Delaware river sturgeon often ten feet in length is now said to be worth from $100 to $150 However it means has been found to restock that river and the industry will probably be revived

The question arises why the American people should be imposed on by a so called imported article of diet at double cost American skill and enterprise ought to be equal to purveying caviare which will surpass that which comes from Russia Doubtless it would be accepted as fact were it not for the person of jaded appetite who labors under the curious and perverted notion that his special dishes must be prepared by foreign hands of the art culinary —Pittsburg Post

HOW MUCH DO YOU EAT?

According to the poet we live by admiration hope and love According to the physiologists we live by proteids carbohydrates and fats

The repair part of our food is called proteid It has a large amount of nitrogen Of all we eat about a tenth should be proteid Proteid is found in meats eggs milk nuts and other things

The carbohydrates such as cereals starch and sugar together with fats form the bulk of our food being the necessary fuel to keep the vital flame alive

Until recently the standard of proteid intake generally accepted was that of Voit a Munich experimenter who put the amount at 118 grams Professor Chittenden of Yale after some apparently thorough experiments thinks that one half the Voit quantity of proteid is sufficient

This is not a question of meat or no meat as some people seem to think for you can get proteid out of non flesh food Consequently neither Chittenden nor Fletcher advocates an exclusively vegetable diet

How much shall I eat asks the layman How shall the human body be kept in nitrogenous equilibrium? is the way the scientist puts it

Chittenden's bills of fare like those of Fletcher have no odd items or fad foods Fletcher insists on chewing as of paramount importance while to Chittenden the main thing is not to eat too much But Fletcher insists that if you chew and chew with zest and also be guided by your appetite you will never eat too much

On the other hand Sir Wm Mitchell Sir James Crichton Browne and some others think the proteid supply recommended by Chittenden not half enough Says Sir James

Chittenden's favorable criterion in his experiments is body weight and by that criterion he is condemned for an infant travel old weighing eight and one half pound consumes daily 400 grams of mother breast milk giving it grams of proteid 2 07 per kilo of body weight 1 6 of nitrogen and 218 08 fuel value That is to say a man weighing 154 pound would on this infant scale have 154 grams of proteid per diem or 7 grams above the Voit standard and 21 times Chittenden's maximum —Boston Globe

Paper from Cotton Stalk

If there is truth in the statement that commercial paper can be successfully made from the stalk of the cotton plant the world will be laid under a great tribute to this royal product of the South in fields

Since the cotton gin was invented by Eli Whitney on a plantation near Savannah Georgia—some time over a hundred years ago—the cotton plant has almost literally clothed the human race

But the beneficence of this great staple is by no means confined to the wearing apparel which it supplies

For when the eye of this nation turned its thoughts to the waste products in the hope of converting them into sources of revenue it was the cotton plant which stimulated and rewarded this quest by disclosing the hidden possibilities of wealth which lay dormant within the cells of the cotton seed

And from this despised outcast which was once wholly without value in the market and which was used only to fertilize and enrich the fields has come the long line of oils whose manufacture today employs thousands of men and nets millions of dollars to the owners of the mills

Because the meal has been found to make excellent food for fattening cattle

Yet it seems that the means of the cotton plant for blessing civilization have not been exhausted and we are now told on what seems to be good authority that within the fibres of the cotton talk there is material enough not only to supply the domestic demand for commercial paper but to bid for the trade of foreign nations

On the most conservative basis it is estimated that the South can supply 4 000 000 tons of cotton stalk pulp

And if the manufacture of commercial paper in one of this products is successfully exploited it will mean the addition of millions of dollars to the already imperial revenues which are furnished by this regal plant of Dixie—Atlanta Georgian

LAW AGAINST JUSTICE

Does it sound sensational to declare that American law to a very large extent makes for injustice? The facts are as sensational as the sound The American Bar Association has admitted it leading judges have admitted it and President Taft once framed a proposed amendment that no judgment civil or criminal should be reversed unless it appeared affirmatively that the error or the complaint has resulted in a miscarriage of justice Americans often mourn about lynch law Not a few say do they take into account the part played by the laws delays in encouraging lawless attempts at justice In England procedure is swift and punishment follows with certainty For seventy five years in England Ireland Scotland and the British colonies all over the world there has not been one case of lynching We have recently pointed out that the lawyers succeeded in beating simplification in Montana In an admirable article in the Kansas City Bar Monthly for March Professor John D Lawson of the University of Missouri recalls the fact that when the Missouri legislature passed a law simplifying procedure the supreme court of that state upset it Judge Lawson believes that our civil procedure is immeasurably behind the age and that in criminal procedure we have not advanced a step since the days of Queen Elizabeth Judge Amidon of the federal bench has stated that if a man has the means to keep up the fight he can in a majority of cases escape punishment for crime

As our rules are now the main concern is not a search for truth Lawyers struggle to get errors into the record witnesses are bullied and judges are afraid Those complicated technicalities which the English judges invented long ago to protect the individual from cruelty and oppression have been retained and exaggerated by us The English threw them away when the days of cruelty and oppression were at an end An indictment in England now states in perhaps forty words of utmost simplicity that a certain crime was committed by a certain person We fill pages of foolscap with most obsolete language and then upset convictions if some one of the unnecessary words can be twisted into a failure to observe some minor rule The conviction of a man for murder is upset because the foreman of the jury spelled first fust Another conviction for murder is upset because the indictment charged that the victim died instantly instead of then and there another because breast was spelled without the r another because the record failed to state the fact that the prisoner was present at his own trial although the court could readily have determined that beyond a reasonable doubt These things truly sound incredible We need a Jeremy Bentham to goad us into making legal justice a reality We need a novelist to do what Dickens did in Bleak House or what Goldsmith did in A Citizen of the World We need a John Wesley to point out that our attempts at justice would have brought discredit on any court of centuries ago in Greece or Rome—Collier's Weekly

TAXING THE TOYS.

The proposed Payne bill the worst compilation of graft ever introduced in any American congress does not stop with increasing the cost of clothing for men and women, underwear hosiery gloves blankets and table linen groceries tea and spices but it goes still further and places a heavy tax a prohibitive tax on Santa Claus

As every one knows the majority of the Christmas toys come from the old world where throughout the summer the peasants of Germany Switzerland and France are occupied in making the inimitable toys that gladden the hearts of children of this country at Christmas It is impossible to produce these exquisite handmade toys in this country because it is an art which has been handed down for generations in the old world However certain American financiers desiring to commercialize the Christmas spirit have conceived of a joker which the Republican ways and means committee willingly incorporated in the Payne bill The joker provides that toys which now retail for a few cents would if the Payne bill passes have to pay the tariff which the toy represents in miniature In other words a toy automobile would have the duty of a real automobile a toy horse would have to pay the tariff imposed on a real horse—about $ 0—and so on through the list This makes the importation of toys absolutely impossible and forces the toy buyers to spend their money for all the manufactured by machinery junk which the American toy factories wish to force upon the market

It would seem as if this were about the limit to which the spirit of graft can go —Richmond Item

LUXURY

Signor Ferrero has told us a good many new things about the people of ancient Rome and given us a lot of new views concerning events with which we were familiar His latest effort is a description of luxury in the days of Rome and in the present It seems that we are wrong in supposing that the Sybaritic conditions so poetically described by ancient writers are to be accepted in the light of modern instances The Romans at their richest were a rather poor people Their luxuries were few and less debilitating than we imagine They drank no spirits and their wines were light Their homes were celebrated in their day for their wonderful luxury but judging from the ruins now extant they were small and disagreeable places in which to live Even their temples were poor compared with those of modern or even medieval times The finest palace in Rome was on a street twelve feet wide

The distinguished historian insists that in those days there is not only actually but comparatively much more debauchery than in the palmy days of Rome He thinks that we ought to learn a lesson from the past that Rome fell largely through its love of such Oriental luxury as was imported—even innocuous as it was by comparison with modern standards All of us remember the plaint of Virgil that it was the invention of ships which ruined the Roman people because it made Eastern luxury too easily attainable

It is a rather new view but one which may be contemplated with interest and profit That the Roman senator in the days of Nero really lived less comfortably than the average mechanic of today is a statement that offers food for reflection and congratulation — Philadelphia Inquirer.

HAMILTON R. CURRY TELLS OF SHOOTING

GIVES HIS REASON FOR KILLING MAN

Says Jackson Advances Toward Him with a Cornknife—The Witness Coolly Reviews the Incidents of His Career and of the Day He Takes Jackson's Life—Progress of Trial.

Upper Sandusky, April 28.—[Special.]—Hamilton R. Curry, the Erie Railroad company's detective, who shot and killed John W. C. Jackson, near Marion, last November, took the stand in his own behalf at his trial here for first degree murder, Tuesday afternoon. It was not a dramatic incident. Curry was cool and collected, and he told his story with due deliberation.

The Tuesday afternoon session opened at 1:30 o'clock. Clerk Hare called the roll of jurors. A good-sized crowd was present. The attorneys for the defense were still busily engaged in conference over matters at issue and the opening of business was delayed some minutes by their non-arrival.

When the attorneys had returned, Curry, the defendant, was sworn by Clerk Hare, and then took the stand. Curry was examined by Fred E. Guthery, one of his attorneys. He said he was born in Clark county, Kentucky, near Lexington, thirty-four years ago. He resided for years on a farm in the center of the celebrated Blue Grass section of Kentucky. His mother is still living, his father having died in 1883. His mother, who has been present at the trial since its beginning, is in her seventy-sixth year.

Curry has a peculiar southern drawl. His father was sheriff of the county for twelve or fourteen years and was succeeded by the defendant's oldest brother, who served two terms. Another brother was a deputy United States marshal for some years. After his father had died and Curry had become eighteen years of age, defendant moved to Winchester, Kentucky, a town nearby. There he lived ten years. He attended public school, two private schools and a Methodist Protestant college while living there.

Curry was also employed as a clerk at Winchester. He attended the Virginia Military institute, in order to prepare for attending West Point, but sickness compelled him to give this up before the final yearly examination. He enlisted in Kentucky and served throughout the Spanish-American war as a private. When he was mustered out at Lexington he spent some months at Winchester, his old home, and then spent some time at surveying a railroad near Republic, Mexico. He later came back to Winchester, spent a year there, and then went to Cincinnati in 1901 or 1902. He was first employed there by a traction company as a civil engineer and then returned to Mexico. He said he was assistant superintendent of a big rubber plantation in Mexico for two years, and again returned to Cincinnati, having suffered an attack of tropical fever. He was employed as inspector of the new water mains in Cincinnati, was then off duty nearly a year because of rheumatism. He later was employed on track elevation work in Cincinnati, until he moved to Marion last July. He was married last August and has a wife and two stepdaughters, aged thirteen and fifteen years.

The witness told where he lived in Marion and took up a story of the shooting. He knew of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and two daughters, they living on the Erie farm. He told of arresting an Italian employe of the road, a mere boy, late in October. He was convicted of stealing a lantern, which was stolen by the boy from the company. The witness told of his recovering this lantern from the Jackson home. He said Jackson gave up the lantern and claimed he did not know it was stolen property. The witness did not think Mrs. Jackson heard the conversation. Later Curry returned to the Jackson home and summoned Jackson to appear as a witness in the case. The Italian boy pleaded guilty to the charge and was not tried.

Curry said that some days later he saw Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and one of their daughters stealing coal from the right-of-way of the railroad. He said the Jacksons left after he ordered them to go away and never to return for any coal. He denied that he ever gave any of the Jacksons permission to take coal. About a week later the witness saw the Jacksons again picking up coal. He was then on the roof of the transfer-house, watching for thieves, he being the only watchman over tracks stretching four and one-half miles.

Curry said that at this time Mrs. Jackson and one daughter were on the tracks, throwing coal into a meadow. Jackson was inside and was loading it into a two-horse wagon. This was one-quarter of a mile from Curry and by the time he had reached the spot the Jacksons had driven away. He denied that he ever had any conversation with the Jacksons concerning the stealing of coal, other than the one given above.

On November 30, the witness said he was at his duties in the Erie yards at the "hump." He saw the entire "hump" crew and conversed with some of them. This was between 2:20 and 2:30 p. m., he said. He stopped where Mr. and Mrs. Jackson were husking. He buttoned up his coat when he left the "hump," because the wind was blowing. He pulled his hat down to keep it from blowing off and did not remember where he kept his hands. He had no feeling of malice against Jackson.

Curry was then instructed to give all the details of the affair to the jury. He said: "I walked up to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and conversed with them. They finished where they were husking and Jackson picked up a bundle of fodder and started away. I followed and told him I had a warrant for his arrest. He said he hadn't done nothing, and wouldn't go with me. He became angry and started away.

"I followed, trying to get him to read the warrant. He struck it, tearing it in two. One piece flew from my hand, and I walked over and picked it up. I told him he could go in the morning or the same evening, but he refused. I said, 'Then I will have to take you.' I took hold of him and he jerked from his coat and ran to the cornknife. He raised it and started back. I said 'Stop, Jackson and drop that knife.' He kept on coming and I told him again to halt. He did not stop and I pulled the revolver and fired. Jackson fell. I saw McDonald, whom Jackson had called, coming and thinking he was after the knife I ran and picked it up. McDonald then stopped. Mrs. Jackson was right behind me when I reached the body. I walked around Jackson's head and went back to the "hump" and told a man I knew to summon an ambulance.

"I then went to Marion and went into the grocery store and telephoned to police headquarters. I then went home and informed my family what had occurred, sent a telegram to my brother and drank a cup of coffee. After this I went uptown, met Mr. Uish and rode in his buggy to the office of Justice Gompf and surrendered. I was afterward taken to jail and have since been a prisoner.

Curry was the last witness. Both sides announced that they had no further testimony and court adjourned until 8:30 this morning.

The arguments of the attorneys began with Attorney George B. Scofield, who spoke from 8:50 to 10:05, covering the evidence in the case. Following a ten-minute recess, D. C. Parker, of Upper Sandusky, representing the state, talked from 10:15 until 11:30 o'clock, when court adjourned for dinner. Mr. Parker took up the pathetic side of the tragedy and described the sorrow and the suffering of the Jackson family.

This afternoon, Mr. Parker continued to address the jury. He will be followed by Robert Carey, F. E. Guthery and D. R. Crissinger for the defense. Thursday morning, Attorney John Egan will close for the defense and Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice will close for the state. It is expected that Judge Daniel Babst will deliver his charge to the jury by noon, Thursday.

The Final Hours.

Upper Sandusky, April 29.—[Special.]—The Curry trial was resumed promptly at 1 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, Attorney D. C. Parker for the state concluding a forceful argument at 1:25, at which time Robert Carey began the opening argument for the defense. He finished at 2:35.

Mr. Carey's argument was a vigorous one, filled with scathing denounciation of Prosecutor Justice for having purchased clothes for Witness McDonald, whom Mr. Carey styled as a crook of the worst kind. McDonald and the Jackson family were severely handled for their testimony which Mr. Carey claimed was totally at variance from that of disinterested witnesses.

After a short recess, D. R. Crissinger followed in an eloquent speech for the defense. Mr. Crissinger prefaced his review of the evidence with an appeal to the jury to sustain Detective Curry, whom, he claimed, had only acted within the sphere of his duty and stated that, to convict him as an officer, as he styled the defendant, would be to put a premium upon lawlessness. Mr. Crissinger's speech was carefully listened to by the audience, which was larger than at any other time during the trial. He concluded his argument at 4:08, and Mr. Guthery, who was to have spoken next for the defense, not being prepared to proceed with his argument, an adjournment was taken until this morning at 8:30 o'clock. He will be followed by John Egan, of Dayton, who will finish for the defense, after which Mr. Justice will close for the state.

The trial of Hamilton R. Curry for the murder of J. W. C. Jackson, which is being held at Upper Sandusky, will be brought to a close, this afternoon, and it is expected that the case will go to the jury about 3 o'clock.

Court convened, this morning at 8:45 o'clock. Attorney F. E. Guthery, one of the attorneys for the defense, made his plea which lasted until 10:15 o'clock. He made a complete review of the evidence in the case in a fine plea. After his address, a ten minute recess was taken. At 10:25 o'clock, court was called to order and Attorney John Egan began the closing argument of the defense. The court-room was crowded to its capacity and the corriders were filled with persons anxious to hear the plea of Attorney Egan. The best of order was kept by the large crowd and the tick of the clock could be heard during the period of his address. He upbraided Mrs. Jackson, the daughters, and Frank McDonald. He closed his address at 11:55.

Court adjourned after the address of Attorney Egan until 1:30 o'clock when Prosecutor Charles L. Justice will make the final argument for the state.

TALE OF JOHN SCHABER AND YELLOW PASSPORT

SPENDS A FORTUNE IN CLEARING NAME

Schaber Is Well Known in This City and Has Relatives Here—Serves Eleven Years in German Prison for Crime of Which He Is Innocent. Dies of a Broken Heart.

Word has been received by relatives in this city announcing the death of John Schaber, which occurred at his home in Cleveland Saturday. Mr. Schaber was a cousin of Mrs. John W. Thompson, of Blaine avenue and Mrs. John Meinhart, of the Boulevard. He was well known in this city where he has frequently visited. The Cleveland Leader gives the following account of his life and death:

The tale of a man with a yellow passport, whose one object was to remove the disgrace of a criminal conviction, is laid bare in the life of John Schaber, manufacturer, who died at his home, No. 2191 east Seventy-First street, Saturday.

Schaber was wealthy and respected. Apparently he had all that conduces to happiness. But in reality, his life was a tragedy—so much so that two years ago he attempted suicide. He failed in his effort. Physicians say his death, Saturday, was due to natural causes. Those who knew him intimately declare he died of a broken heart.

The sorrow which continually preyed upon John Schaber dates its beginning half a century back in Germany. Schaber, then a young man of twenty-two years, was unjustly convicted of murder. He was condemned to death, but this sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment. And Schaber, convicted on evidence, a majority of which was later admitted to be perjured, went to prison, where he served eleven years. Then he was pardoned and came to America.

For a few years he followed his trade of cabinet making in Chicago, and then settled in Cleveland. He began manufacturing picture frames. His business increased rapidly and he amassed a fortune.

Schaber then had the means to reopen his case and clear his name. He spent thousands of dollars flooding all Germany with the printed history of his conviction. Public opinion was in his favor. The attorney who had secured his conviction, risen to the high post of chief justice of the court of appeals, resigned following a bitter denunciation by the German press, and a few months later died in a madhouse. He was the one man who might have cleared Schaber's name.

Then came another misfortune. The factory caught fire and burned to the ground. The loss was more than $100,000. Schaber gazed at the ruins silently. Then he went home, locked himself in his room and shot himself twice. The first bullet he fired into his head. Then he fired a second shot into his breast. For weeks he hovered between life and death, but finally he recovered.

Broken in health and spirit he began to rebuild his business. For two years he labored, and then the end which he had attempted to hasten came of its own accord.

FRANK RODGERS IS INDICTED AT LIMA

Held To Answer for Murder in Second Degree.

Several weeks ago, Rodgers went to Lima with Daniel Williams, with whom he had been working as a timber cutter near Bellecenter, Logan county. One Saturday night, Williams was found lying on a street corner with a knife wound in his neck that resulted in his death.

While the authorities were trying to locate Williams' assailant, Rodgers went to police headquarters and asked for a night's lodging. He was recognized as answering the description given of Williams' companion and placed under arrest. At the coroner's inquest, Rodgers, who declared that he had no remembrance of having stabbed his companion, identified the knife found near the scene of the tragedy as one similar to the one he had carried with him to Lima.

Attorney W. T. Copeland, of Lima, represented the defendant, who waived examination in the mayor's court and Rodgers was held to the grand jury. He is a son of Mrs Lucy Rodgers, of Enes avenue.

THE WIDOW'S MONEY SEWED IN HER DRESS

Unusual Find Made by Second-Hand Dealer.

MONEY DISCOVERED IN OLD CLOTHING

Late Mrs. Sarah Collins Sews Her Small Sum of Cash in Her Dress Lining—Clothing Is Sold to E. P. King, Who Finds the Money and Returns It to Probate Court.

That Diogenes would not have to seek long to find an honest man in Marion, and that the old cynic would not have to carry a lantern, either, is the opinion of Attorney Lloyd DeGolley, administrator of the estate of the late Mrs. Sarah Collins, and Probate Judge W. S. Spencer.

When Mrs. Collins died, several weeks ago, at her home on Reed avenue, she possessed little wealth. The old lady had lived alone and was found dead by a neighbor.

At the request of relatives, Attorney DeGolley was appointed administrator by the probate court, and what few chattels the decedent left were ordered sold. Some old clothing and furniture were bought by E. P. King, proprietor of a south Main street second-hand store.

A few days ago, while Mr. King's children were rummaging through the clothing, they heard something jingle.

And sure enough it was money. Sewed in the lining of a dress they found over $17 in silver and bills. This they turned over to their father, who remembered that he had purchased the clothing, together with some furniture, from Mr. DeGolley for $37. He notified the attorney, and, Wednesday, in the probate court, the money was turned over to go on record as a part of the aged woman's estate.

S. R. RAUHAUSER RECEIVES LETTER

No Decrease in the Number of Firemen Planned.

S. R. Rauhauser, president of the council, is in receipt of a letter from the manager of the state inspection bureau regarding the possibility of there being a decrease in the number of employes of the fire departments of the city. In the letter, the manager of the state department states that the fire departments are none too large and the apparatus not any too good, and that if a cut is made the insurance rates must increase. The information was received by the state department through an item in one of the local papers which stated that there would have to be a decrease on account of a shortage of funds. The president of the council and members of the safety board state that the matter of laying off firemen is not being considered and that no cut will be made in this department.

As the ragua palm, growing without cultivation, covers large districts in a strip of land lying along the coast from Peru through Ecuador up into Colombia, there is some difference in the form and texture of the ivory nut which is the fruit of this tree.

VARIETY OF WEATHER GIVEN MARION THURSDAY

A Heavy Storm Strikes the City Shortly After Noon.

THE RAINFALL IS EXTREMELY HEAVY

Streets and Cellars Are Flooded. People Are Aroused, That Morning, by a Storm of Wind, Hail, Rain and Lightning—Little Damage Is Done by the Storms.

The weather man is no respector of persons or of conditions. Thursday, he ordered for Marion a hail storm at a very unseemly hour. Who wants to be awakened at 1 o'clock in the morning by stones of ice pounding on the roof or against the windows? Maybe, the milkman is an exception, but he has to get up anyway, and he is just as well satisfied with being aroused from slumbers by hail as he is by his dollar alarm. Scores of people, who say they sleep better at 4 in the morning than at any other time, were startled from their heavy slumbers by the fusilade of hail and rain, accompanied by wind and lightning. One man, who is an optimist, got out of bed just to see the hail.

"It was the finest hail storm I have ever seen," said this individual with a glow of enthusiasm, Thursday.

The weather man is more peculiarly-affected during the month of April than any other month of the calendar. One minute he says, "Let 'er rain," and there comes a downpour. Then he'll say, "Presto! Let the sun shine." Sure enough Old Sol peeps from behind a cloud and mud and water disappear almost like magic.

At noon the sun shone with a brilliance that reflected the kindness of nature in the hearts of all humanity. Suddenly, a strong wind swooped down from the south and west, and with it rode Jupiter Pluvius. Then the rain came. As the wind died away it fell in veritable torrents. The lower sections of streets were flooded and even in the higher quarters of the city the gutters were filled to overflowing. Some wind and lightning accompanied the storm, but no particular damage has been reported aside from the flooding of some cellars where the drainage proved unequal to the demand.

The flood covered the tracks of the street railway company on west Center street to such a depth that the operation of the cars was stopped for some time.

The rainfall amounted to 1.21 inches, the fall considering the duration of the storm being among the heaviest in the last two years.

Clerical Ambiquity.

"It looks pretty bad," said the bishop to the captain.

"Couldn't be much worse, bishop," replied Foretopp.

Half an hour later the steamship was diving under the waves as if she were a submarine and leaking like an old door.

"Looks worse, I think, captain," said the bishop.

"We must trust in Providence now, bishop," answered Foretopp.

"Oh, I hope it has not come to that!" gasped the bishop.

FURIOUS GALE HITS CHICAGO

Three Meet Death and Many Are Injured.

WIRE PROSTRATION COMPLETE

Streetcar Traffic Impeded and Communication With East Cut Off For Several Hours—Two Inches of Rain Fell In City and Suburbs—Pittsburg Reports Two Deaths During Severe Wind and Electrical Storm — Other Points of Country Visited.

Chicago, April 30. — Three lives were lost in an electrical storm accompanied by a gale of wind that approached the fury of a cyclone, which swept over the city from the west. As a result the city was cut off from direct outside communication for nearly two hours.

The center of the storm was on the south side of the city. Here one laborer was killed and several more were injured when the roof of the Grand Crossing Tack company's plant was blown off.

A cottage at Seventy-ninth street and Ellis avenue was blown down by the wind, and it was reported to the police that two men were killed and a woman and a child injured.

Telegraph and telephone wires were cut down on all sides of the city. It was the most complete prostration of wire service in 12 years. The Western Union reported that all its wires were cut off as though by a flash of lightning. Communication with the east was established slowly and by circuitous routes.

Traffic was impeded on surface and elevated lines and suburban trains were delayed. Two inches of rain fell here and in neighboring cities. Many persons were injured by flying boards and knocked down by streetcars and wagons.

TESTIFIES FOR SON

General Hains Describes Captain's Many Eccentricities.

Flushing, N. Y., April 30.—An affecting scene was presented at the trial of Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., when General Hains, retired, the aged father of the defendant, related with suppressed emotion the incidents of his son's life from boyhood to the time when, driven to madness by his wife's alleged infidelity, he shot down the man who, the defense contends, was the cause of it.

Beginning with the boy's tendency to nightmares and general excitability during his earlier years, the old general traced his career through the campaigns of the Spanish-American war when he fought under his father in Porto Rico, and was "always in the way on the firing line."

The harrowing scenes which ensued at the family conference, held after the captain's return from an eight-months' tour of duty in the Philippines, were depicted by the general in a trembling voice.

Bennett is held as a witness. According to his story, there was no provocation for the assault. Dugan had been locked up for drunkenness before the police had heard Bennett's story. Dugan, when confronted by Bennett, replied: "I do not know that I did it. If I did, I am surprised."

When the indictments against these men were quashed on April 10 last it was on the ground the indictments were faulty; that they were returned by a grand jury composed of 23 men under the federal law, instead of by a jury of 16, as provided by the Arkansas law, which was held to be in force in old Indian Territory by federal enactment at the time the alleged frauds were committed.

EUNUCH SWINGS FROM BRIDGE

Deposed Sultan's Favorite Son Said to Have Been One of Leading Conspirators In Recent Uprising of the Troops—Siege of Hadjin Raised by Timely Arrival of Troops and Missionaries Report All Well and In No Danger.

Constantinople, April 30.—The constitutionalists have lost no time in bringing the conspirators in the recent rising to trial. The military court, sitting in the war office, condemned about 250 prisoners to death, and they were executed. Nadir Pasha, the second eunuch of the palace, was hanged at dawn on the Galata bridge, and his great body was viewed by thousands.

The national assembly, which met under the presidency of Said Pasha, decided that the Sultan Mehmed V should take the oath of constitution within a week. The assembly also ratified the deportation of Abdul Hamid to Salonikl.

It is alleged that the chief authors of the recent mutiny were Abdul Hamid's favorite son, Prince Mehmed Burpan Eddine, Rear Admiral Said Pasha, son of Kiamil Pasha, the former grand vizier, and Nadir Pasha, who were engaged for a long time prior to the rising in corrupting the troops. The two former have fled.

MISSIONARIES ARE SAFE

Constantinople, April 30. — A welcome message was received from the town of Hadjin, in the province of Adana, where five American women missionaries have been alone with thousands of refugees who sought safety there from bands of Moslems seeking to put them to the sword. Hadjin has withstood a siege for the past eight days, and the missionaries have been sending out frantic appeals for help. The message was from Miss Lambert, the daughter of Bishop Lambert. It said: "With the arrival of the troops, the disorders in and about the city have ceased, and we are all safe and well."

The Turkish cabinet has taken up the consideration of the situation in Adana and neighboring districts. The new governor general, Mustafa Zihni, is due to arrive at the town of Adana today. He has been instructed to take the most energetic measures to re-establish order and to relieve the sufferers.

Adil Bey, permanent undersecretary of state in the ministry of the interior, said that the government would make a searching investigation into the cause of the disorders and punish the instigators. Reports received at the ministry of the interior indicated that quiet now prevailed everywhere.

Communication Interrupted.

Beirut, April 30.—The telegraph lines are now interrupted and little news was received here from the districts where the terrible disorders have prevailed for the past two weeks. Although an enormous number of refugees have reached Latakia, the governor, who has been getting troops together, claims that he is perfectly able to protect the city, but this is doubtful, particularly if the British warship Diana, now there, is withdrawn. Refugees are flocking to all the cities, and it is imperative that they receive immediate aid, as thousands are starving.

SAYS CONSUMER IS OUT IN COLD

Senator Rayner Attacks Payne-Aldrich Measure.

WANTS TARIFF FOR REVENUE

Would Place Heaviest Burdens on Luxuries and Give Ample Protection to American Workmen — Goes After Trusts as Principal Beneficiaries of New Revenue Bill and Asserts They Never Give People a Share of Their Ill-Gotten Gains.

Washington, April 30. — Senator Rayner of Maryland delivered an address denouncing the Payne-Aldrich tariff measure as failing to provide revenue and protecting the industries controlled by trusts rather than giving any relief to the country. He declared free trade is impracticable in this country and asserted that not a single Democratic senator would vote for it if presented to him in a bill.

He frequently entered upon oratorical flights and concluded with a series of condemnations of the so-called trusts of the country. He declared his belief in incidental protection in order to maintain the wages of American workingmen.

"I have never believed in free trade between this country and any other countries," Mr. Rayner said. "I think from every practical standpoint it is perfectly preposterous to talk about it. I think the country would vote such a proposition down almost with practical unanimity. I believe in custom house taxation and I do not believe any other system will ever take its place to the satisfaction of the American people. Free trade is not the question before us, and no amount of reproach and adjectives will deter me from stating what the question really is."

Reading from the Democratic platforms of 1876 and 1892, Mr. Rayner said they embodied his party's axiom, "and that is," he added, "that we have no constitutional power to collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue." The pending tariff bill, he declared, should be entitled "A bill to encourage the industries of the United States and for no other purpose." He did not believe it would add very much to our present revenue collections. He characterized the whole framework of the measure as protection and revenue afterwards. If he had the framing of a tariff bill he said he would levy the lowest tax possible upon the necessaries of life and the highest tax possible upon the luxuries, and "would protect American labor so as to maintain at all times the standard of American wages. Throughout the whole bill I would look out for the consumer. You may examine this bill, outside of the free list, and it is almost impossible to discover the consumer in any of its complicated schedules."

Combats Idea.

Mr. Rayner combatted the idea that the great corporations of the country benefit the consumers by utilizing economies or increased wages. On the other hand, he declared of the trusts:

"They raise prices, they limit production, they lower wages, they contract the demand for labor, they throttle competition, they monopolize the wealth of the land, they withdraw it from the channels of circulation, and when they are driven from one state they obtain their franchises in another and then return with insolence to pursue their calling in the place from which they are banished. I can look around in my own state and observe that whenever a new enterprise is started that comes in conflict with them they sweep down upon it as the cormorant does upon his prey, and that their rapacity is never appeased so long as a spark of vitality is left in any competitor that crosses their path.

"I do not find within this bill a line or sentence that weakens their grasp upon the commerce of the country. On the contrary, they show their hateful front in almost every schedule of this bill.

"As against them, if I had the opportunity in the framing of a tariff bill, I would open the ports of entry to the markets of the world. It is said that if we do this, we will interfere with other industries that are competing with them. There is hardly a word of truth in that statement, because they tolerate no rivalry and permit no interference."

Senator Nelson of Minnesota made an earnest plea for the admission of lumber free of duty. His assertions aroused a quite general discussion, which was participated in by Senators Hale, Warren, Carter, Clapp, McLaurin, McCumber, Elkins, Aldrich and Gallagher.

Columbus, O., April 30. — Superintendent C. C. Lemert of the state insurance department in a statement announces that a shortage of $1,342.58 had been found in the agents' account of the Ohio Underwriters' Mutual Fire Insurance company of Columbus, and that the assets had been padded by the entry of 14 bogus policies aggregating in amount $62,500, the premiums on which would offset the shortage. These policies, he said, had been canceled just after the company's report for 1907 had been made to the department. By his direction, he said, the officers and directors of the company had made good the shortage. They held a former employe responsible.

BRIDE OF TWO MONTHS SHOOTS HERSELF

Mrs. William Massie Tries To Take Her Life.

INFLICTS A WOUND IN RIGHT BREAST

Bullet Passes Through Right Lung. Mrs. Massie Is but Eighteen Years of Age—She Uses a Thirty-Two Caliber Revolver—Attempts Suicide at Home on Cottage Street.

Mrs. William B. Massie, eighteen years old, a bride of a little over two months, shot herself in the right breast with suicidal intent at her home on Cottage street, Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. She can not survive.

Mrs. Massie was found shortly after shooting herself with a thirty-two-caliber revolver. "I have a reason for doing it," she murmured when asked why she wanted to take her own life, "but I won't tell."

At 3 o'clock that afternoon, Mrs. Massie had sunk into unconsciousness, and those at her bedside said she was barely breathing.

Dr. F. B. Sawyer was called at a late hour.

Mrs. Massie was formerly Miss Bertha Porter, daughter of William Porter. She was married to William B. Massie, aged twenty-four years, son of William A. Massie, February 20, Justice Charles E. Gompf performed the ceremony. The young husband is employed as a stone quarryman.

Mrs. Massie's attempt at suicide is believed to have been due to jealousy. Wednesday evening, she had trouble with a woman, whom she thought had been in the company of her husband, but who, it is said, was with her husband's brother instead.

THE AMATEUR GARDEN.

A few weeks ago Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, won notoriety by urging and leading the movement to utilize the vacant lots and nooks and corners in and adjacent to the city by planting them in potatoes for the benefit of the poor and the many families out of work at the time. The cost of living was high and many were in compulsory idleness, and Mayor Pingree's movement, which was laughed at in the beginning, proved to be of great value to many worthy people. It not only assisted in replenishing many lean larders, but it taught families how to do more than one kind of work, the value of knowing more, and something of the spirit, of independence which cultivation of the soil gives above all other labor.

The high cost of living, price of vegetables, etc., seem to have the effect of stirring many households to action in the matter of home production. More than the usual number of small gardens and miniature farms are being established in backyards and lots, and many amateur gardeners are wielding the hoe and the rake and cultivating visions of fresh lettuce, onions, radishes, beets and the like.

Doubtless many of them will be doomed to disappointment but the pleasure of anticipation will be worth more than the cost, and the outdoor exercise may be the means of saving enough in doctor bills to pay for vegetables the whole year. The belief that one has a garden is worth money. It affords pleasure and healthful labor and in anticipation of results to be achieved, and in many instances these amateur gardens will be successful in reducing the cost of the family commissary department. Let everybody have a garden who can.—Nashville American.

SEVEN-HOUR DAY FOR THE WORKERS

Organized Labor Is Behind a Movement To Shorten Work Days.

Organized labor throughout the United States has started a move for the seven hour day in all lines of work.

Harry D. Thomas, secretary of the Cleveland United Trades and Labor council and of the Ohio Federation of Labor, announced the other day that the agitation for an eight hour day was only the beginning of the large movement.

The ultimate purpose is to reduce the hours of labor until all men are employed, even if it is necessary to reduce the working time to one hour a day. Only in this way, Thomas says, can workingmen share with their employers in the benefits of time and labor saving machinery.

NEW RULER ON THRONE

Reign of Abdul Hamid Thing of the Past

MEHEMMED RECHAD EFFENDI SUCCEEDS

Is Now the Sultan of Othman Empire

OLDEST MALE OF HOUSE OF OTHMAN

The Founder of the Turkish Dynasty

The Accession of Rechad to the Throne Makes the Twenty-Ninth Sultan Since the Conquest of Constantinople in 1451—There Were Many Who Preferred the Nephew Abdul Yussef Izzedin, as Successor to the Ex-Sultan but His Election Would Have Violated the Law That the Succession Shall Go to the Oldest Male Descendant of Othman

[BULLETIN]

London April 27—The Constantinople correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph has just wired the British agency that the rumor is current in Constantinople that Abdul Hamid is dead The rumor is generally credited

Rechad Enthroned

Constantinople April 27—The enthronement of the new sultan Mehammed Rechad Effendi was consummated in the Seraskerat square at 9 this evening The ultimate swore allegiance to the constitution and was greeted with a tremendous ovation The enthusiasm lasted for several minutes

The new sultan will bear the title of Mehemmed V

The city is wild with enthusiasm over the change In administrations Everything everywhere and the streets are filled with rejoicing crowds that resemble Babel of old

In Cheraghan Palace

Constantinople April 27—Deserted by all his suite save a few slaves Abdul Hamid was found unconscious on the floor of the last chamber of Yildiz today by Macedonian soldiers The palace servants fled before the approach of the soldiers and forced door after door until they broke into the harem The ex sultan was taken to Cheraghan palace on the Bosphorus shore

When the troops entered the Yildiz kiosk they sent word by servants to Abdul who had fled to the harem demanding him to come out for conference Abdul refused to obey the summons Three messages were sent to him Then the officer in charge ordered the troops to search the palace

Abdul Hamid Deposed

Constantinople April 27—The sultan has been deposed His deposement is the joint work of the national assembly which secretly voted in favor of his deposition and religious edict by the Sheik Ul Islam approving and legalizing the action

Immediately following the deposition of Abdul Hamid his brother Mehemmed Rechad Effendi was proclaimed the new sultan amid scenes of the wildest enthusiasm

The Pyramids have fallen Hail to Rechad was the cry that was repeatedly sounded through the streets The ceremony of Rechad's enthronement is now in progress

A 9 o'clock salute of 101 guns was fired in honor of the new sultan Here is the official salute

Rechad is sixty five years old and is to the deposed sultan the oldest living descendant of the house of Othman the founder of the dynasty His succession to the throne makes the thirty ninth sultan since the conquest of Constantinople in 1451

Nephew Preferred

There were many who preferred as successor the nephew Yussef Izzedin but his selection would have violated the law that the succession shall go to the oldest male descendant of Othman Otherwise Yussef would have been chosen, as Rechad is considered a man of the weakest qualities

Rechad has had practically no experience in governmental affairs and for twenty-five years has been almost a prisoner in the Yildiz Kiosk It is conceded that he will do whatever the Young Turks demand of him as he is lacking in the craftiness and initiative of Abdul

The Sheik Ul Islam who is at the head of the Mohammedan church based his decree approving the deposition on the ground that Abdul had violated the Moslem religion by many criminal acts and that therefore it was no sacrilegious act to dethrone him

The secret session of the national assembly which began at noon yesterday was resumed today Its discussion of Abduls fate practically amounted to a trial of the sultan as he was under charges corresponding to impeachment The charges were that his supremacy was harmful to the church contrary to the sacred law and opposed to the best interests of the Turkish people

Fate of Abdul

Abduls future fate is unknown It is certain that he will be stripped of his fortune about $10,000,000 and his life is considered none too safe

Despite the joy in the city over Abduls downfall it is certain the country will not unanimously approve of todays action and a civil war is probable In Asia Minor especially the danger of a revolt far surpasses that of the last ten days is imminent

Fatal quarrels have broken out in the ranks of the Young Turks over the question of how the sultan shall be punished Unless a decision is reached soon the discussion will so divide the dominant party that many of the fruits of its great victory will be lost

Chefket Pasha the rival ruler of Constantinople is today organizing a big army with which to sweep Asia Minor and put down the disorders there An army of 60,000 reactionaries is now marching from Smyrna to Eskishehir in the hope of gathering

BELIEVES CARR IS A MURDERER

Of Women Who Are Killed in Dayton

THAT IS OPINION OF FIRE MARSHAL

Has Faith in Story of Mrs Middlestetter

He Believes the Dayton Woman Would Not Make a Statement to the Dayton Police Is That She Fears for Her Life—Will Not Talk to Rodgers Till Carr Is Locked Behind the Bars

Columbus O April 27 The fire marshal's department and the Dayton police are working in unison Elmer Carr whom the fire marshals are trying to implicate in the series of six women murders that has shocked Dayton during the past few years

State Fire Marshal W S Rogers today has on file at his office a voluminous statement containing the sworn testimony of Mrs Carrie M Middlestetter of Dayton which points to Carr as the author of at least two of the fiendish crimes Carr is now under arrest at Dayton charged with arson The Dayton police say that this is the only charge that can be brought against him

Marshal Rogers says that Carr lived near the Middlestetters home in Dayton and had the woman under such control that he did not hesitate to reveal to her his deeds After Carrs arrest he says Mrs Middlestetter told the fire marshal that Carr had indulged upon a saturnalia of crime She declares he kept a set of disguises in the house in which he went forth at night

The Womans Story

Lizzie Pulhart was outraged and murdered at Dayton January 1 Mary Archer was murdered there January 2 Mr Middlestetter according to Rodgers says that Carr left her house on the night of January 2 in one of his disguises He returned at 11 o'clock stripped his outer clothing and disguises with kerosene and burned them On the night of January 1 she says in the affidavit Carr had eighteen year old Lizzie Pulhart in her boarding house He left with her at midnight The following day she says he had her accompany him to an abandoned mansion There he pointed significantly to a cistern in the back yard and told her it would some day tell a tale Carr was arrested I suspect in the Pulhart case but released After his arrest he sent word to Mrs Middlestetter says Rodgers telling her to hide the girls hat which he had left at her house This she promptly did

In Carrs Power

Mr Middlestetter says Rodgers was completely in Carrs power He had threatened her with death if she told what she knew She was brought to make her revelations after the state fire marshals had represented to her that Carr was under arrest and lied to go to prison

Rodgers concludes his statement as follows

Because of their utter failure to accomplish anything in their efforts to clear up the mysterious murders the police of Dayton ridiculed the idea that Carr is guilty but they have not the evidence yet

Deputy Fire Marshals O H Holtenbeck of Toledo and O P Hullinger of Springfield are in Dayton today working in the case They are expected to lay their evidence before the county prosecutor today

To Cremate Landlady

We have evidence indicating that Carr fired the home of Mrs Middlestetter in an attempt to cremate her Fire Marshal Rodgers declared today Attempts to get her to talk however were useless until after we had arrested Carr and assured her that he would be sent to the penitentiary

In answer to the scepticism of the Dayton police Rodgers today gave out a statement as to why he had made public the contents of the affidavits

It is a rule of this office not to give out any of its evidence Rodgers said In this case however it seemed to me wise to do so Our case primarily deals with the arson charges The Dayton police have been unable it seems to get at the facts of the recent murders there and I believe it to be my duty to make known the facts that had come to us concerning them

RECHAD EFFENDI, NEW SULTAN OF TURKEY WHO WAS LONG A PRISONER

RECHAD EFFENDI

Rechad Effendi the new sultan of Turkey is a weaker character than Abdul Hamid For years in fact during the greater part of his life—he has been virtually a prisoner in his palace It was not until Abdul Hamid was forced to reconstruct the constitution that he took any cognizance of his brother other than to keep spies about him Under the Moslem law the sultan brother next of age is the heir to the throne Rechad Effendi was born in Constantinople in 1871

Loring and Heller Are Under the Weather

It Is Thought To Be the Strain of Preparation and the Result of Climate Change—Indisposition Not of Serious Nature—Colonel Roosevelt Gets Couple of Bucks—Ordinary Specimens

Nairobi British East Africa April 27—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and his son Kermit were fully recovered from their indisposition today and the colonel was astir early anxious to get a shot at something and complete preparations for pushing on Both Loring and Heller however are showing the strain of preparation and of the climate change Their indisposition however is not of a serious nature

The colonel shot a couple of bucks today but they were not particularly good specimens However a good field exhibition from herding lions coming through the night a promise of better sport to come and he does not chafe at the enforced delay as much might be expected from one of his temperament

The fact that a hunt is must finally be admitted has brought more and more impressed me to rely on it only in that manner on the arduous program arranged is to be carried out

It is expected that the real hunting will begin in another day or two when the enervating effects of the weather shall have worn off

COLONIZED BY THE JAPANESE

Little Brown Men Entering the Canal Zone

THAT'S THE REPORT AT THE CAPITAL

An Explanation of Trip of War Secretary

Because of the Delicate Nature of the Case No Representations Have Been Made to Japan, but the United States Government Is Collecting all the Information Available on the Subject at Hand

Washington April 26—It was learned today that one of the chief objects that will be investigated by Secretary Dickinson during his present trip to Panama is the report that the canal zone is being colonized with Japanese

The republic of Colombia is said to be responsible for the bringing of the Japanese to the zone and American diplomatic officials have been directed to make representations to the Colombian government that the United States protests this violation of unfriendliness

But while the delicate nature of the case to its relations have been made to Japan but the United States government is collecting all information available on the subject

Getting Pointers

It is said by well informed that the Japanese on the zone are taking advantage of the construction work so that Japan would be in a position to put the canal out of business in the event of war between the United States and that country

The war department is considering the enlargement of the army and the militia organizations on foot to do if possible the every man in Japan on the zone and the government they be held for by well

If the government is considering a war it is dealing with the situation in the confidence in Panama as it seems is reports would indicate

The Taft administration is determined to maintain friendly relations with Japan if possible President Taft himself has visited Japan and he received a telegram of congratulations from the Mikado when he took the reins of government on March 4 It would be a delicate request to make of Japan that she keep her men away from the canal

BUCKEYE MAID TO BE MISSING

Festivities at Bath, England, Will Not Be Graced

BY REPRESENTATIVE FROM OHIO TOWN

Not a Lack of Beauties To Fill the Bill.

Bath in Bath Township, Summit County, Ohio Has Beauties in Plenty, but It's a Question of Soulful Cash—The Expenses Each Way and While Abroad Must Be Met by Representative Chosen

Columbus O April 27—There will be no beauty of Bath Bath township Summit county to represent that hamlet at the festivities at Bath England July 6 to 26

Not that there is any lack of beauties to qualify for the place Beauty there is in plenty It is the soulful element of hard cash that will bar the village from its due representation at the English pageant

Three weeks ago Governor Harmon received a letter from the lord high mayor of Bath England asking him to name some girl from Bath Ohio to be the guest of the English city Harmon deputized Representative Charles Kempel of Akron to make the selection It was believed all expenses would be paid

Must Pay Freight

Then came the news that the beauty would have to bear the expense of the journey herself

Monday Kempel drove again to Bath There was no reception committees There were no invitations to dinner There were no ovations

On his return to Akron Kempel dictated a report to Governor Harmon

Dear Governor Kempel wrote, Yours of recent date at hand I can assure you I greatly appreciate the honor you have bestowed upon me in selecting me to pick out the 'Beauty of Bath' But sad to relate there will be none They've all backed out Money is scarce and none of them want to pay her own expenses Bath no longer likes me so I enclose herewith your commission for the appointment and the letter received by you from the mayor of Bath England

LONG RACE OF GREAT LINERS

Ends in Victory for Nieuw Amsterdam

SHE OUTSTEAMS THE VADERLAND

In a Mighty Struggle from Land to Land

Stokers Work Till They Are Exhausted and the Engines of the Two Liners Are Worked for Every Ounce of Speed in Them, Yet Both the Captains Hold That There Is No Race

New York April 27—'No, there was no race but we saw the Vaederland and our boat being the best, why we were first to reach the Hook But we did not race That is against the rules of the line,"—The captain of the Nieuw Amsterdam

Why should we race? We ran our ordinary trip and would have been first in port if the Nieuw Amsterdam had not crowded toward the northerly or short course But it was no race —The captain of the Vaderland

Two giant liners were in sight nearly all the way across the Atlantic Their passengers landed today filled with stories of an exciting ocean race in which stokers worked over the fires until they fell exhausted and of engines worked to the last ounce of speed that was in them But neither liner would officially admit that there was a speed contest Yet there is joyousness on the Nieuw Amsterdam and corresponding gloom on the Vaderland

Clear the Channel.

When morning broke on April 18, both vessels were just clear of the English channel with the Nieuw Amsterdam five miles astern The latter had left Rotterdam and Boulogne the night before at about the same hour that the Vaderland left Antwerp and Dover Both started to crowd their boilers 'a little' and the race was hit up until on Wednesday morning the 21st the vessels were abreast with the Holland-American boat about four miles to the north

Both vessels saluted with their sirens colors were dipped and then the engine forces got busy The Nieuw Amsterdam hauled toward the north heading for the shorter course as a gale began to kick up the waves The weather became very rough on the 22d and 23d, but the zig Dutchman kept her head toward the north with the result that she was abeam of the Ambrose channel light this morning One hour and fifty minutes later the Vaderland came in

NO REDUCTION IN WAGE SCALE

To Be Made by United States Steel Company.

THAT'S OPINION IN BUSINESS WORLD

Quarterly Report Just Made Tells Its Own Story.

Despite the Cry of Hard Times Made by the Officers of the Company and the Cut in Prices, the First Report of the Year Shows a Business Condition Satisfactory to the Directorate.

New York, April 28.—Business and speculative circles are a unit today in believing that there will be no reduction in wages by the United States steel corporation, and Wall street today generally attributes to the giant combine a distinct victory over the opposition, inasmuch as most of the independent have reduced wages, while the big company has not. As a result they say the steel corporation has disarmed criticism by many of those politicians who have opposed the merger of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company and placed itself in position where it is stronger than ever with the speculative public and Americans generally.

The quarterly report as it is studied tells its own story and shows that the United States Steel corporation common and preferred stocks are probably on a permanent dividend paying basis. Despite the cry of officials of the company that times were bad and the sharp cut in prices to "meet the action of the independents in underbidding us," as Judge Gary put it, the earnings for the first quarter of this year were eminently satisfactory to the directors.

And on the very eve of the meeting the biggest of the steel companies that are controlled by the trust—the Carnegie Steel company—calmly puts up its prices and explains that this action is due entirely to the "enormous number of orders on our books." And this action, according to report, forecasts a return to the old prices for steel on many products. Steel nails were never cut, even nominally for market purposes and the products that were cut were the articles that the independents had had a monopoly on the market for some time.

If the Wall street experts are to be believed, the United States Steel company has corralled most of the open orders for steel and steel products that have been on the market for the last ninety days and have enough future contracts booked to ensure an increased business in all mills until late in the coming fall.

And most of these orders were booked at prices that mean substantial profits for the trust according to the belief here.

One reason assigned for the general optimism of the steel manufacturers here is that they have received assurances from Washington that the senate schedules will be the ones finally adopted in the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

Follow Steel Lead.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 28.—It is officially announced that the Jones & Laughlin company has followed the lead of the United States Steel corporation and advanced the price of steel bars and plates.

WORD FOR FAT MEN.

For the past 1900 years the relative popularity and efficiency of fat men have been mooted questions. Two of the most distinguished citizens of that rather extensive period have arrayed themselves on opposite sides of the question. Julius Caesar declared, at least in the hearing of William Shakespeare, that he preferred to have about him "fat men, sleek-headed and such as sleep o' nights." On the other hand, Edmund Day, who has given to the world a couple of the most delightful fat men in all dramatic literature, declares: "Shucks." Nobody loves a fat man." Only he didn't say "shucks."

To the literatuge of this all-absorbing question a Philadelphia contemporary contributes the suggestion that Mr. Taft has established for all time in American history the fat man as an institution entitled to public esteem. He is walking in neither [illegible] dalliance nor in mental poise. He is the cabined only in regard to the size of his hat. He is technically obese—not to be hargic either mentally or physically. Some one remarked long ago that in some fat men the fat predominates and in others the men predominate. In Mr. Taft it is the man. The future political fashion historian will probably note that during the closing years of the first decade and the early years of the second of the twentieth century the Americans wore their big men large.

Mr. Taft discounts the efficiency of the "lean and hungry Cassius" whom Caesar disliked and he disproves Mr. Day's pessimistic despair as to the possible degree of public confidence and esteem which a fat man may attain. This is at least keeping up with the procession in these days of historical iconoclasm, if nothing more. May not the fat man after all be the victim of circumstances? Is thinness a condition precedent to the possession of lovable qualities or the accumulation of kindly wishes on the part of one's fellow citizens? There is much to be said in favor of the fat man, even if Falstaff and Henry VIII were inclined to embonpoint.—Kansas City Journal

REGULATING PEDESTRIANS.

The rules of the road are so much a matter of course that one hardly thinks of their existence. Every driver knows them and realizes as well that to break them they will not only be punished but that the breaking usually brings its own punishment. We have laws regulating automobiles, and the street commissioners are trying to help street traffic by a set of new regulations. But who will regulate the pedestrian? Now the majority of city dwellers are afoot while they are in the street; for one person in a carriage there are a hundred on the sidewalk.

And how many pedestrians are there who observe the rules of the road? As for offenders, there is the woman whom the attractions of the show window draw to the wrong side of the walk; the man who has an idea the suddenness of whose coming brings him to a standstill; the umbrella or parasol carrier who holds that dangerous weapon under the arm; the gossips who stand in the middle of a crowded sidewalk when a doorway or a side street would do as well; most exasperating of all, the man who turns to fling a last word to a friend who has passed and drifts across the sidewalk with eyes behind him. This last it is impossible to avoid; you may dance from side to side, but he is sure to get you. One such offender obstructs the dozens who are behind him in a hurry, for we are all in a hurry, whether the hurry is unnecessary or not. A traffic squad empowered to arrest all pedestrian violators of the rules of the road would be the busiest body of police the city ever saw.—Boston Globe.

LOAFERS.

Why is a loafer, anyway? If the loafer at the very best does no good for himself he certainly harms those with whom he comes in contact. We have frequently heard the remark that there is but fifteen cents difference between the man who works and the man who doesn't, and that the latter has it. When particularly the young men of a town see a loafer who somehow manages to get along on no income, they are inclined to believe that the world owes them a living also and work becomes objectionable to them, when it should be a pleasure. We have too much patience with loafers. We should learn from the bee, which, when it can secure conclusive evidence against the drone, drives him out. A loafer is a vagrant. He ought to be treated as such unless he can be compelled to go to work. In Leavenworth, for instance, there are loafers, and this in spite of the fact that there is an abundance of employment here. If under these circumstances these loafers refuse to work, they should be compelled to get out of town or stay at home, where they could not exert a bad influence upon others by their idleness.—Leavenworth Times.

WRIGHT BROTHERS WILL NOT EXHIBIT

Refuse the Offer of State Board of Agriculture.

Columbus, April 28.—The Wright brothers will not exhibit their aeroplane at the state fair. The state board of agriculture which was willing to pay them $10,000 to do so received a letter Monday from a brother of the inventors stating that they would fulfil their contract with the government for a demonstration at Fort Myer, after which they would return to Europe and that they would not contract to make any public flights in this country this year. The brothers are working on improvements on the machine and do not wish to devote time to anything else for a year or more.

People are naturally so honest that they seldom think they have to live up to it.

AGAIN KIDNAP BILLY WHITLA

Unless the Lad's Father Pays Over $10,000,

WILL AN ALLEGED BLACKHAND GANG

Two Men Are Arrested in the City of Boston.

One Calls for Letter in Answer to That in Which Demand for the Money Is Made—He Is Nabbed by the Police and a Second Man, Who Comes with Him, Is Taken at the Postoffice Door.

Boston, Mass., April 28.—Charged with threatening to again kidnap Billy Whitla of Sharon, Pennsylvania, unless his father sent $10,000 to Boston, two men are today under arrest in this city. They are John W. Wright, thirty-nine, of Boston, Ernest H. Martin, thirty-six, of Dorchester.

Some days since, James Whitla, of Sharon, Pennsylvania, received a letter signed "Arthur Howard Brown" which had been mailed in Boston. It read:

"Dear sir: Our society not having received money for return of boy, voted to send the four men that had charge of all arrangements of getting boy and take him again in the night. This may mean death to the boy, so it was voted to give you a chance to pay money. The Black Hand, on receiving same, will not trouble you. We are not interested in the Boyles, who were just tools for our men. Send $1,000 in $50 bills and $9,000 in $1,000 bills. Send it in three lots. Have it here Monday morning. No trickery or it will go hard with the boy. When taken will send men of steel for the latter. Send money to Arthur Howard Brown, post station A, Boston, Massachusetts."

Upon receipt of the letter, Whitla turned it over to the federal authorities. He was told to answer. At station A here, Wright presented an order signed "Arthur Howard Brown" for the letter and was nabbed by federal detectives. Martin was caught at the postoffice door.

Wright denies having anything to do with the matter, saying that he was promised five dollars by an unknown man to get the letter addressed to Brown. His story is not believed by the police.

Owing to the probable difficulty of conviction on the charge of blackmail, the Boston police today turned Wright and Martin over to the federal authorities, who will prosecute on the charge of illegal use of the mails. The men will be arraigned this afternoon before United States Commissioner Hayes.

GOVERNOR OF STATE AND FORMER BOSS

Is Not Recognized by Chief Clerk Kirtley.

Columbus, April 28.—Yesterday, a tall, well-built and prosperous-looking gentleman entered the office of the attorney general and stated that he would like to see General Denman at once. "I am very sorry, but he is very busy and cannot be disturbed now," said Chief Clerk R. H. Kirtley. "What is your name, sir," asked the affable chief clerk. "My name is Harmon," was the reply. It then dawned upon Kirtley that his visitor was none other than the chief executive of the state. Kirtley's face turned fifty-seven different kinds of colors. As soon as he pulled himself together he ushered the governor into General Denman's private office. Before being appointed to his position last January, Kirtley was employed in the legal department of the C. H. & D. railroad, of which Judson Harmon has been receiver for several years. Kirtley neither knew his governor nor former employer.

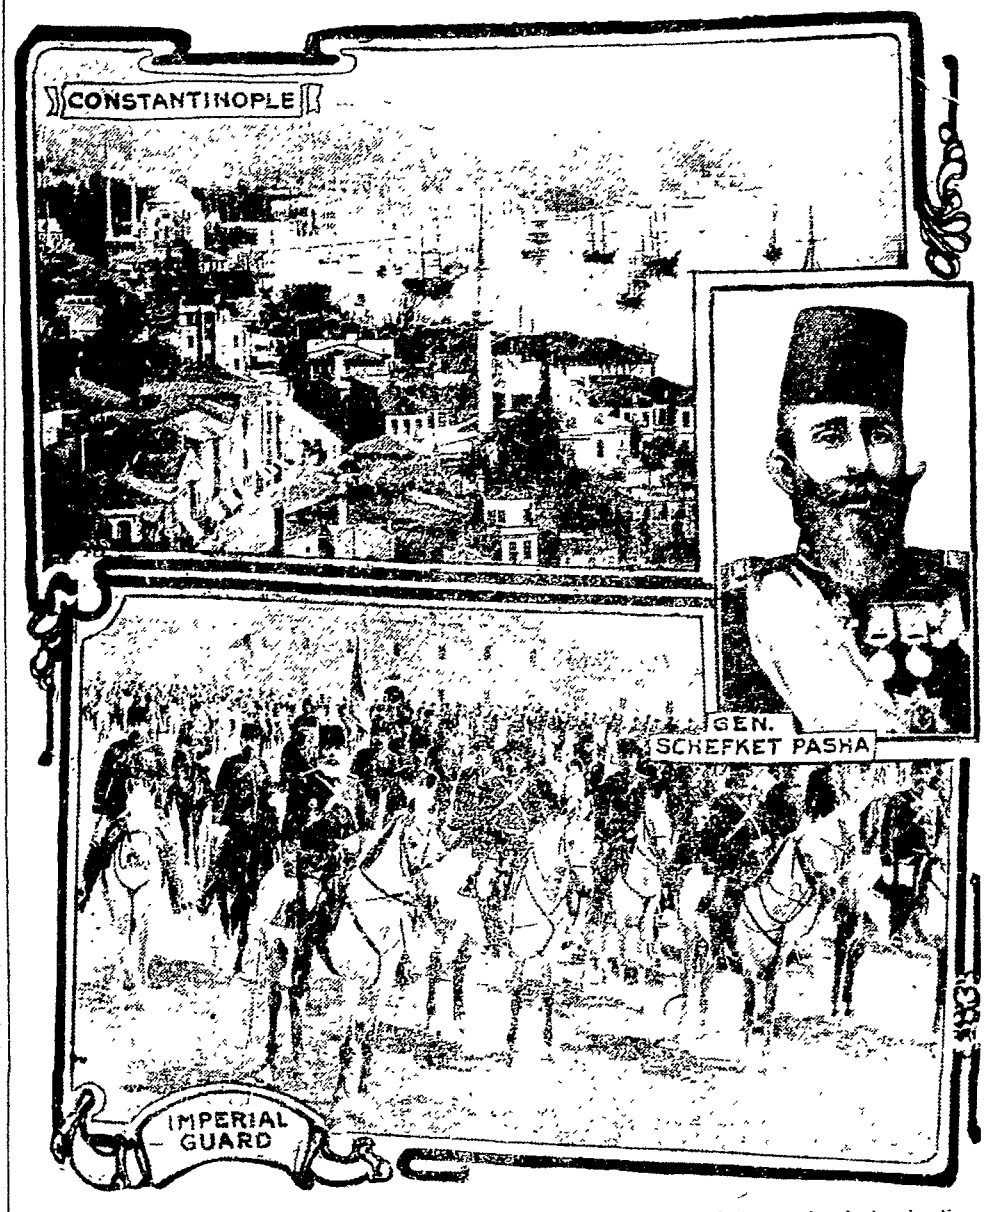
Logansport, Ind., April 28.—Officer Joseph Kruger was fatally wounded and one highwayman was killed in a desperate battle this morning between Officers Kruger and Burke and two highwaymen. The highwaymen had just held up and robbed five well-known citizens whom they met on the principal street just before daylight.

The men were overtaken within two blocks from the scene. Then reply was a bullet which fatally wounded Kruger. The latter fired as he fell and killed one of the men, while the other escaped. A general alarm brought policemen and citizens in automobiles in the chase and the second man was caught north of town later in the morning.

NEW SULTAN'S GUARD, VIEW OF CAPITAL AND GENERAL WHO LED INVADING ARMY



Americans, Englishmen and Frenchmen who witnessed the occupation of Constantinople by the Young Turk army in command of General Schefket Pasha were amazed at the coolness and order of the triumphant troops. Detachments were sent to the embassies and to guard the property of foreigners, and everywhere the officers of the invading army were assuring the people that they were in no danger. General Schefket Pasha gave to Enver Bey the credit of having worked out the plan of capturing the city and when the volunteer troops caught sight of Enver Bey they broke ranks surrounded him and cheered wildly. The invaders at once began the task of burying the dead, employing tram cars to transport the hundreds of mangled bodies to the cemetery. The slaughter was greatest around the Yildiz kiosk, where the former sultan's guard fought with marvelous desperation.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTER

PRESIDENT AT GRANT BANQUET

Hero of Appomattox Is Eulogized by Taft.

HE REPRESENTS GENIUS OF WAR

Grant Had Understanding of the Situation.

Realized That There Could Be No Lasting Peace Till the South Was Whipped To Stay Whipped—Refers to Lee's Far-Sighted Patriotism in Bringing Long Struggle to Close.

Philadelphia, April 28.—As the principal speaker at the Grant birthday dinner given by the Union league in this city, President Taft paid a glowing tribute to the soldier-president.

A year ago Mr. Taft was sharply criticised because of certain of his references to General Grant, and he took advantage of the opportunity to express anew his admiration for General Grant as a man, as a soldier and as chief executive of the United States.

General Horace Porter of New York and President James F. Hope of the Union league were among the speakers who preceded President Taft. The latter, following his almost invariable custom, spoke extemporaneously.

Mr. Taft spoke at times in a half-quizzical manner, and there was frequent laughter as well as applause at his reference to political conditions in the south.

After making complimentary references to the Union league's patriotic support of the Union army at the outbreak of the war and during its continuance, Mr. Taft said, among other things:

"It is peculiarly fitting that this club each year should celebrate the birthday of that man who was then coming into prominence, and upon whom hung, it would seem, the whole destinies of this nation.

Praises Military Genius.

"It is not for me, in the presence of gentlemen who knew him, who served with him, who ran the risk of life and death with him, to descant upon his life, his peculiar virtues, or at length to attempt to picture his character to this company; but there are certain things with respect to General Grant that today come back with reference to our passing life. They said that Grant had not the military genius that other generals displayed in the war. To my mind his mind and brain represented the very genius of the war to suppress the rebellion, because it was his mind that grasped the thought that until we had fought it out with our brave opponents and met them in the field and fought them as soldiers, until we convinced them by our strength that the battle was hopeless, we could not expect to have a united country. And therefore, from the time he began in Belmont until he accepted the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, he fought not cities, not points of strategy, but he fought the enemy, and he fought and fought and fought until he wore out the opposition, because only by wearing them out could he hope to bring about the condition in which there should be complete peace.

"What I wished particularly to dwell upon was the spirit of that peace at Appomattox, represented on the one hand by the magnanimity and far-sightedness of Grant, and by the self-restraint and courage and far sighted patriotism (for that it was) on the part of Lee in bringing the struggle to a finish. That spirit at Appomattox is today, I trust, triumphant."

WOMEN OF CITY OF ST. PAUL MOBBING TRADING STAMP STORES

The hard battle won by the merchants of Minnesota in the state legislature which resulted in the passage of new anti-trading stamp legislation, was immediately followed by the assaults of hordes of angry women on the trading stamp stores in St. Paul. The women, holding thousands of stamps, could not be convinced that the stamps were not valueless and it was necessary to call out the police and place guards in charge of the stores for several days to prevent riots and the destruction of the premium stocks of the stores. The new legislation does not prohibit the use of stamps, but provides that no more shall be issued unless their value is plainly printed on their face, and their redemption at their stated value is provided for. Stamps showing a face value of a dollar must be good for a dollar's worth of goods at the stores or the stores will be closed by the authorities. The stamp craze struck St. Paul five or six years ago, and gained a strong foothold. Merchants generally were forced to adopt them because of the action of the principal dealers in making them one of their trade-getting devices. The stamp companies have reaped enormous profits because of the hundreds of thousands of stamps issued which fell into the hands of women who never completed their "books," and therefore never presented them for redemption. Under the system of the stamp companies, each stamp issued was paid for by a merchant before it reached the customer of his store. Unredeemed stamps were therefore clear profit to the companies. The new legislation will practically abolish the business.

ROSS GOES WET BY HEAVY ODDS

Chillicothe Has a Most Exciting Election.

STREET FIGHTS ARE NUMEROUS

Almost the Entire Police Force Is in Jail.

The Drys Have Much the Better of the Official Side of the Proposition, but in the Matter of Polling Votes They Are Not in the Same Class with the Wets Who Win by a Majority of 1,800.

Chillicothe, O., April 29.—Ross county voted wet by a majority approximating 1,800. The election was characterized by disorderly scenes throughout the day and at times disturbances were in the nature of riots. The fight was the hottest ever witnessed in Ross county, and for a month past both sides had waged an unceasing conflict. The election was held under the Rose county unit law.

Dozens of arrests were made. The police, under orders from Mayor Yaple and the city officials, gathered in the dry workers and the members of Company H, Fourth regiment, O. N. G., sworn in as special deputy sheriffs by Sheriff Swope and Judge John W. Goldberry, gathered in the wets. At one time almost the entire police force was in jail and Chief Prendergast in hiding.

Because the police all appeared in citizens' clothes and were accused of working actively for the wets, Sheriff Swope announced that he was in charge. With the consent of the officers, the entire national guard company stationed here was sworn in as deputies, armed with heavy wagon spokes and revolvers, and sent out on the streets to preserve order.

The guardsmen seemed to take special delight in arresting the police. As soon as the latter made an arrest, a party of guardsmen would grab him and drag him off to the county jail, usually by the heels.

Springfield Takes Last Drink.

Springfield, O., April 29. — Springfield saloons closed their doors at midnight. Thirsty citizens made good use of the last few wet hours the city will know for three years at least, and as a result there were more drunks seen on the street than in any one day for years.

LITTLE SPRING DOES BUSINESS

"One thing at least is certain. It was the sugar company that profited by the frauds. The amount realized was sufficient to pay a dividend of nearly six per cent. on the capital stock of the New York company."

AMERICAN CAVIARE

Persons with epicurean tastes will be interested to know that the production of real Russian caviare is likely to be resumed at Philadelphia and other points along the Delaware river It may come as a shock to some of them to learn that the caviare sandwiches to which they have paid swollen prices in American restaurants originated as to their central ingredient in streams and lakes in this country where sturgeon do not abound The fact is not known however Nor could it be when it is recalled that the industry has been rather extensive in this country

In several of the western states a business is made of catching the sturgeon extracting the roe and shipping it to Russia where it is treated and exported to the United States ready for the table For many years this industry thrived at Sandusky Ohio the Lake Erie sturgeon having been supplied in thousands for the purpose Up to 1890 the Delaware river furnished large quantities of sturgeon roe for exportation But the fishermen virtually exterminated this species of fish in their greed and a Delaware river sturgeon often ten feet in length is now said to be worth from $100 to $150 However it means has been found to restock that river and the industry will probably be revived

The question arises why the American people should be imposed on by a so called imported article of diet at double cost American skill and enterprise ought to be equal to purveying caviare which will surpass that which comes from Russia Doubtless it would be accepted as fact were it not for the person of jaded appetite who labors under the curious and perverted notion that his special dishes must be prepared by foreign writers of the art culinary —Pittsburg Post

According to the poet we live by admiration hope and love According to the physiologists we live by proteids carbohydrates and fats

The repair part of our food is called proteid It has a large amount of nitrogen Of all we eat about a tenth should be proteid Proteid is found in meats eggs milk nuts and other things

The carbohydrates such as cereals starch and sugar together with fats form the bulk of our food being the necessary fuel to keep the vital flame alive

Until recently the standard of proteid intake generally accepted was that of Voit a Munich experimenter who put the amount at 118 grams Professor Chittenden of Yale after some apparently thorough experiments thinks that one half the Voit quantity of proteid is sufficient

This is not a question of meat or no meat as some people seem to think for you can get proteid out of non flesh food Consequently neither Chittenden nor Fletcher advocates an exclusively vegetable diet

How much shall I eat asks the layman How shall the human body be kept in nitrogenous equilibrium? is the way the scientist puts it

Chittenden's bills of fare like those of Fletcher have no odd items or fad foods Fletcher insists on chewing as of paramount importance while to Chittenden the main thing is not to eat too much But Fletcher insists that if you chew and chew with zest and also be satisfied by your no mid appetite you will never eat too much

On the other hand Sir Wm Mitchell Sir James Crichton Browne and some others think the proteid supply recommended by Chittenden not half enough Says Sir James

Chittenden's favorable criterion in his experiments is body weight and by that criterion he is condemned for an infant travel old weighing eight and one half pound consumes daily 400 grams of mother breast milk giving of it grams of proteid 2 07 per kilo of body weight 1 - to of nitrogen and 218 08 fuel value That to say a man weighing 154 pound would on this infant scale have 154 grams of proteid per diem or 7 grams above the Voit standard and 2 times Chittenden's maximum —Boston Globe

If there is truth in the statement that commercial paper can be successfully made from the stalk of the cotton plant the world will be laid under a great tribute to this royal product of the South in fields

Since the cotton gin was invented by Eli Whitney on a plantation near Savannah Georgia—some time over a hundred years ago—the cotton plant has almost literally clothed the human race

But the beneficence of this great staple is by no means confined to the wearing apparel which it supplies

For when the eye of this nation turned its thoughts to the waste products in the hope of converting them into sources of revenue it was the cotton plant which stimulated and rewarded this quest by disclosing the hidden possibilities of wealth which lay dormant within the cells of the cotton seed

And from this despised outcast which was once wholly without value in the market and which was used only to fertilize and enrich the fields has come the long line of oils whose manufacture today employs thousands of men and nets millions of dollars to the owners of the mills

Because the meal has been found to make excellent food for fattening cattle

Yet it seems that the means of the cotton plant for blessing civilization have not been exhausted and we are now told on what seems to be good authority that within the fibres of the cotton talk there is material enough not only to supply the domestic demand for commercial paper but to bid for the trade of foreign mailers

On the most conservative basis it is estimated that the South can supply 4 000 000 tons of cotton stalk pulp

And if the manufacture of commercial paper minus of this process is successfully exploited it will mean the addition of millions of dollars to the already imperial revenues which are furnished by this regal plant of Dixie—Atlanta Georgian

Does it sound sensational to declare that American law to a very large extent makes for injustice? The facts are as sensational as the sound The American Bar Association has admitted it leading judges have admitted it and President Taft once framed a proposed amendment that no judgment civil or criminal should be reversed unless it appeared affirmatively that the error or the complaint has resulted in a miscarriage of justice Americans often mourn about lynch law Not a few say do they take into account the part played by the laws delays in encouraging lawless attempts at justice In England procedure is swift and punishment follows with certainty For seventy five years in England Ireland Scotland and the British colonies all over the world there has not been one case of lynching We have recently pointed out that the lawyers succeeded in beating simplification in Montana In an admirable article in the Kansas City Bar Monthly for March Professor John D Lawson of the University of Missouri recalls the fact that when the Missouri legislature passed a law simplifying procedure the supreme court of that state upset it Judge Lawson believes that our civil procedure is immeasurably behind the age and that in criminal procedure we have not advanced a step since the days of Queen Elizabeth Judge Amidon of the federal bench has stated that if a man has the means to keep up the fight he can in a majority of cases escape punishment for crime

As our rules are now the main concern is not a search for truth Lawyers struggle to get errors into the record witnesses are bullied and judges are afraid Those complicated technicalities which the English judges invented long ago to protect the individual from cruelty and oppression have been retained and exaggerated by us The English threw them away when the days of cruelty and oppression were at an end An indictment in England now states in perhaps forty words of utmost simplicity that a certain crime was committed by a certain person We fill pages of foolscap with most diffuse language and then upset convictions if some one of the unnecessary words can be twisted into a failure to observe some minor rule The conviction of a man for murder is upset because the foreman of the jury spelled first fust Another conviction for murder is upset because the indictment charged that the victim died instantly instead of then and there another because breast was spelled without the r another because the record failed to state the fact that the prisoner was present at his own trial although the court could readily have determined that he was The claims truly sound incredible We need a Jeremy Bentham to goad us into making legal justice a reality We need a novelist to do what Dickens did in Bleak House or what Goldsmith did in A Citizen of the World We need a John Wesley to point out that our attempts at justice would have brought discredit on any court of centuries ago in Greece or Rome—Collier's Weekly

TAXING THE TOYS.

The proposed Payne bill the worst compilation of graft ever introduced in any American congress does not stop with increasing the cost of clothing for men and women, underwear hosiery gloves blankets and table linen groceries tea and spices but it goes still further and places a heavy tax a prohibitive tax on Santa Claus

As every one knows the majority of the Christmas toys come from the old world where throughout the summer the peasants of Germany Switzerland and France are occupied in making the inimitable toys that gladden the hearts of children of this country at Christmas It is impossible to produce these exquisite handmade toys in this country because it is an art which has been handed down for generations in the old world However certain American financiers desiring to commercialize the Christmas spirit have conceived of a joker which the Republican ways and means committee willingly incorporated in the Payne bill The joker provides that toys which now retail for a few cents would if the Payne bill passes have to pay the tariff which the toy represents in miniature In other words a toy automobile would have the duty of a real automobile a toy horse would have to pay the tariff imposed on a real horse—about $ 0—and so on through the list This makes the importation of toys absolutely impossible and forces the toy buyers to spend their money for all the manufactured by machinery junk which the American toy factories wish to force upon the market

LUXURY

Signor Ferrero has told us a good many new things about the people of ancient Rome and given us a lot of new views concerning events with which we were familiar His latest effort is a description of luxury in the days of Rome and in the present It seems that we are wrong in supposing that the Sybaritic conditions so poetically described by ancient writers are to be accepted in the light of modern instances The Romans at their richest were a rather poor people Their luxuries were few and less debilitating than we imagine They drank no spirits and their wines were light Their homes were celebrated in their day for their wonderful luxury but judging from the ruins now extant they were small and disagreeable places in which to live Even their temples were poor compared with those of modern or even medieval times The finest palace in Rome was on a street twelve feet wide

The distinguished historian insists that in those days there is not only actually but comparatively much more debauchery than in the palmy days of Rome He thinks that we ought to learn a lesson from the past that Rome fell largely through its love of such Oriental luxury as was imported—even innocuous as it was by comparison with modern standards All of us remember the plaint of Virgil that it was the invention of ships which ruined the Roman people because it made Eastern luxury too easily attainable

It is a rather new view but one which may be contemplated with interest and profit That the Roman senator in the days of Nero really lived less comfortably than the average mechanic of today is a statement that offers food for reflection and congratulation — Philadelphia Inquirer.

HAMILTON R. CURRY TELLS OF SHOOTING

GIVES HIS REASON FOR KILLING MAN

Says Jackson Advances Toward Him with a Cornknife—The Witness Coolly Reviews the Incidents of His Career and of the Day He Takes Jackson's Life—Progress of Trial.

Upper Sandusky, April 28.—[Special.]—Hamilton R. Curry, the Erie Railroad company's detective, who shot and killed John W. C. Jackson, near Marion, last November, took the stand in his own behalf at his trial here for first degree murder, Tuesday afternoon. It was not a dramatic incident. Curry was cool and collected, and he told his story with due deliberation.

The Tuesday afternoon session opened at 1:30 o'clock. Clerk Hare called the roll of jurors. A good-sized crowd was present. The attorneys for the defense were still busily engaged in conference over matters at issue and the opening of business was delayed some minutes by their non-arrival.

When the attorneys had returned, Curry, the defendant, was sworn by Clerk Hare, and then took the stand. Curry was examined by Fred E. Guthery, one of his attorneys. He said he was born in Clark county, Kentucky, near Lexington, thirty-four years ago. He resided for years on a farm in the center of the celebrated Blue Grass section of Kentucky. His mother is still living, his father having died in 1883. His mother, who has been present at the trial since its beginning, is in her seventy-sixth year.

Curry has a peculiar southern drawl. His father was sheriff of the county for twelve or fourteen years and was succeeded by the defendant's oldest brother, who served two terms. Another brother was a deputy United States marshal for some years. After his father had died and Curry had become eighteen years of age, defendant moved to Winchester, Kentucky, a town nearby. There he lived ten years. He attended public school, two private schools and a Methodist Protestant college while living there.

Curry was also employed as a clerk at Winchester. He attended the Virginia Military institute, in order to prepare for attending West Point, but sickness compelled him to give this up before the final yearly examination. He enlisted in Kentucky and served throughout the Spanish-American war as a private. When he was mustered out at Lexington he spent some months at Winchester, his old home, and then spent some time at surveying a railroad near Republic, Mexico. He later came back to Winchester, spent a year there, and then went to Cincinnati in 1901 or 1902. He was first employed there by a traction company as a civil engineer and then returned to Mexico. He said he was assistant superintendent of a big rubber plantation in Mexico for two years, and again returned to Cincinnati, having suffered an attack of tropical fever. He was employed as inspector of the new water mains in Cincinnati, was then off duty nearly a year because of rheumatism. He later was employed on track elevation work in Cincinnati, until he moved to Marion last July. He was married last August and has a wife and two stepdaughters, aged thirteen and fifteen years.

The witness told where he lived in Marion and took up a story of the shooting. He knew of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and two daughters, they living on the Erie farm. He told of arresting an Italian employe of the road, a mere boy, late in October. He was convicted of stealing a lantern, which was stolen by the boy from the company. The witness told of his recovering this lantern from the Jackson home. He said Jackson gave up the lantern and claimed he did not know it was stolen property. The witness did not think Mrs. Jackson heard the conversation. Later Curry returned to the Jackson home and summoned Jackson to appear as a witness in the case. The Italian boy pleaded guilty to the charge and was not tried.

Curry said that some days later he saw Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and one of their daughters stealing coal from the right-of-way of the railroad. He said the Jacksons left after he ordered them to go away and never to return for any coal. He denied that he ever gave any of the Jacksons permission to take coal. About a week later the witness saw the Jacksons again picking up coal. He was then on the roof of the transfer-house, watching for thieves, he being the only watchman over tracks stretching four and one-half miles.

Curry said that at this time Mrs. Jackson and one daughter were on the tracks, throwing coal into a meadow. Jackson was inside and was loading it into a two-horse wagon. This was one-quarter of a mile from Curry and by the time he had reached the spot the Jacksons had driven away. He denied that he ever had any conversation with the Jacksons concerning the stealing of coal, other than the one given above.

On November 30, the witness said he was at his duties in the Erie yards at the "hump." He saw the entire "hump" crew and conversed with some of them. This was between 2:20 and 2:30 p. m., he said. He stopped where Mr. and Mrs. Jackson were husking. He buttoned up his coat when he left the "hump," because the wind was blowing. He pulled his hat down to keep it from blowing off and did not remember where he kept his hands. He had no feeling of malice against Jackson.

Curry was then instructed to give all the details of the affair to the jury. He said: "I walked up to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and conversed with them. They finished where they were husking and Jackson picked up a bundle of fodder and started away. I followed and told him I had a warrant for his arrest. He said he hadn't done nothing, and wouldn't go with me. He became angry and started away.

"I followed, trying to get him to read the warrant. He struck it, tearing it in two. One piece flew from my hand, and I walked over and picked it up. I told him he could go in the morning or the same evening, but he refused. I said, 'Then I will have to take you.' I took hold of him and he jerked from his coat and ran to the cornknife. He raised it and started back. I said 'Stop, Jackson and drop that knife.' He kept on coming and I told him again to halt. He did not stop and I pulled the revolver and fired. Jackson fell. I saw McDonald, whom Jackson had called, coming and thinking he was after the knife I ran and picked it up. McDonald then stopped. Mrs. Jackson was right behind me when I reached the body. I walked around Jackson's head and went back to the "hump" and told a man I knew to summon an ambulance.

"I then went to Marion and went into the grocery store and telephoned to police headquarters. I then went home and informed my family what had occurred, sent a telegram to my brother and drank a cup of coffee. After this I went uptown, met Mr. Uish and rode in his buggy to the office of Justice Gompf and surrendered. I was afterward taken to jail and have since been a prisoner.

Curry was the last witness. Both sides announced that they had no further testimony and court adjourned until 8:30 this morning.

The arguments of the attorneys began with Attorney George B. Scofield, who spoke from 8:50 to 10:05, covering the evidence in the case. Following a ten-minute recess, D. C. Parker, of Upper Sandusky, representing the state, talked from 10:15 until 11:30 o'clock, when court adjourned for dinner. Mr. Parker took up the pathetic side of the tragedy and described the sorrow and the suffering of the Jackson family.

This afternoon, Mr. Parker continued to address the jury. He will be followed by Robert Carey, F. E. Guthery and D. R. Crissinger for the defense. Thursday morning, Attorney John Egan will close for the defense and Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice will close for the state. It is expected that Judge Daniel Babst will deliver his charge to the jury by noon, Thursday.

The Final Hours.

Upper Sandusky, April 29.—[Special.]—The Curry trial was resumed promptly at 1 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, Attorney D. C. Parker for the state concluding a forceful argument at 1:25, at which time Robert Carey began the opening argument for the defense. He finished at 2:35.

Mr. Carey's argument was a vigorous one, filled with scathing denounciation of Prosecutor Justice for having purchased clothes for Witness McDonald, whom Mr. Carey styled as a crook of the worst kind. McDonald and the Jackson family were severely handled for their testimony which Mr. Carey claimed was totally at variance from that of disinterested witnesses.

After a short recess, D. R. Crissinger followed in an eloquent speech for the defense. Mr. Crissinger prefaced his review of the evidence with an appeal to the jury to sustain Detective Curry, whom, he claimed, had only acted within the sphere of his duty and stated that, to convict him as an officer, as he styled the defendant, would be to put a premium upon lawlessness. Mr. Crissinger's speech was carefully listened to by the audience, which was larger than at any other time during the trial. He concluded his argument at 4:08, and Mr. Guthery, who was to have spoken next for the defense, not being prepared to proceed with his argument, an adjournment was taken until this morning at 8:30 o'clock. He will be followed by John Egan, of Dayton, who will finish for the defense, after which Mr. Justice will close for the state.

The trial of Hamilton R. Curry for the murder of J. W. C. Jackson, which is being held at Upper Sandusky, will be brought to a close, this afternoon, and it is expected that the case will go to the jury about 3 o'clock.

Court convened, this morning at 8:45 o'clock. Attorney F. E. Guthery, one of the attorneys for the defense, made his plea which lasted until 10:15 o'clock. He made a complete review of the evidence in the case in a fine plea. After his address, a ten minute recess was taken. At 10:25 o'clock, court was called to order and Attorney John Egan began the closing argument of the defense. The court-room was crowded to its capacity and the corriders were filled with persons anxious to hear the plea of Attorney Egan. The best of order was kept by the large crowd and the tick of the clock could be heard during the period of his address. He upbraided Mrs. Jackson, the daughters, and Frank McDonald. He closed his address at 11:55.

Court adjourned after the address of Attorney Egan until 1:30 o'clock when Prosecutor Charles L. Justice will make the final argument for the state.

TALE OF JOHN SCHABER AND YELLOW PASSPORT

Schaber Is Well Known in This City and Has Relatives Here—Serves Eleven Years in German Prison for Crime of Which He Is Innocent. Dies of a Broken Heart.

Word has been received by relatives in this city announcing the death of John Schaber, which occurred at his home in Cleveland Saturday. Mr. Schaber was a cousin of Mrs. John W. Thompson, of Blaine avenue and Mrs. John Meinhart, of the Boulevard. He was well known in this city where he has frequently visited. The Cleveland Leader gives the following account of his life and death:

The tale of a man with a yellow passport, whose one object was to remove the disgrace of a criminal conviction, is laid bare in the life of John Schaber, manufacturer, who died at his home, No. 2191 east Seventy-First street, Saturday.

Schaber was wealthy and respected. Apparently he had all that conduces to happiness. But in reality, his life was a tragedy—so much so that two years ago he attempted suicide. He failed in his effort. Physicians say his death, Saturday, was due to natural causes. Those who knew him intimately declare he died of a broken heart.

The sorrow which continually preyed upon John Schaber dates its beginning half a century back in Germany. Schaber, then a young man of twenty-two years, was unjustly convicted of murder. He was condemned to death, but this sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment. And Schaber, convicted on evidence, a majority of which was later admitted to be perjured, went to prison, where he served eleven years. Then he was pardoned and came to America.

For a few years he followed his trade of cabinet making in Chicago, and then settled in Cleveland. He began manufacturing picture frames. His business increased rapidly and he amassed a fortune.

Schaber then had the means to reopen his case and clear his name. He spent thousands of dollars flooding all Germany with the printed history of his conviction. Public opinion was in his favor. The attorney who had secured his conviction, risen to the high post of chief justice of the court of appeals, resigned following a bitter denunciation by the German press, and a few months later died in a madhouse. He was the one man who might have cleared Schaber's name.

Then came another misfortune. The factory caught fire and burned to the ground. The loss was more than $100,000. Schaber gazed at the ruins silently. Then he went home, locked himself in his room and shot himself twice. The first bullet he fired into his head. Then he fired a second shot into his breast. For weeks he hovered between life and death, but finally he recovered.

Broken in health and spirit he began to rebuild his business. For two years he labored, and then the end which he had attempted to hasten came of its own accord.

FRANK RODGERS IS INDICTED AT LIMA

Held To Answer for Murder in Second Degree.

Several weeks ago, Rodgers went to Lima with Daniel Williams, with whom he had been working as a timber cutter near Bellecenter, Logan county. One Saturday night, Williams was found lying on a street corner with a knife wound in his neck that resulted in his death.

While the authorities were trying to locate Williams' assailant, Rodgers went to police headquarters and asked for a night's lodging. He was recognized as answering the description given of Williams' companion and placed under arrest. At the coroner's inquest, Rodgers, who declared that he had no remembrance of having stabbed his companion, identified the knife found near the scene of the tragedy as one similar to the one he had carried with him to Lima.

Attorney W. T. Copeland, of Lima, represented the defendant, who waived examination in the mayor's court and Rodgers was held to the grand jury. He is a son of Mrs Lucy Rodgers, of Enes avenue.

THE WIDOW'S MONEY SEWED IN HER DRESS

Unusual Find Made by Second-Hand Dealer.

That Diogenes would not have to seek long to find an honest man in Marion, and that the old cynic would not have to carry a lantern, either, is the opinion of Attorney Lloyd DeGolley, administrator of the estate of the late Mrs. Sarah Collins, and Probate Judge W. S. Spencer.

When Mrs. Collins died, several weeks ago, at her home on Reed avenue, she possessed little wealth. The old lady had lived alone and was found dead by a neighbor.

At the request of relatives, Attorney DeGolley was appointed administrator by the probate court, and what few chattels the decedent left were ordered sold. Some old clothing and furniture were bought by E. P. King, proprietor of a south Main street second-hand store.

A few days ago, while Mr. King's children were rummaging through the clothing, they heard something jingle.

And sure enough it was money. Sewed in the lining of a dress they found over $17 in silver and bills. This they turned over to their father, who remembered that he had purchased the clothing, together with some furniture, from Mr. DeGolley for $37. He notified the attorney, and, Wednesday, in the probate court, the money was turned over to go on record as a part of the aged woman's estate.

S. R. RAUHAUSER RECEIVES LETTER

No Decrease in the Number of Firemen Planned.

S. R. Rauhauser, president of the council, is in receipt of a letter from the manager of the state inspection bureau regarding the possibility of there being a decrease in the number of employes of the fire departments of the city. In the letter, the manager of the state department states that the fire departments are none too large and the apparatus not any too good, and that if a cut is made the insurance rates must increase. The information was received by the state department through an item in one of the local papers which stated that there would have to be a decrease on account of a shortage of funds. The president of the council and members of the safety board state that the matter of laying off firemen is not being considered and that no cut will be made in this department.

VARIETY OF WEATHER GIVEN MARION THURSDAY

A Heavy Storm Strikes the City Shortly After Noon.

THE RAINFALL IS EXTREMELY HEAVY

Streets and Cellars Are Flooded. People Are Aroused, That Morning, by a Storm of Wind, Hail, Rain and Lightning—Little Damage Is Done by the Storms.

The weather man is no respector of persons or of conditions. Thursday, he ordered for Marion a hail storm at a very unseemly hour. Who wants to be awakened at 1 o'clock in the morning by stones of ice pounding on the roof or against the windows? Maybe, the milkman is an exception, but he has to get up anyway, and he is just as well satisfied with being aroused from slumbers by hail as he is by his dollar alarm. Scores of people, who say they sleep better at 4 in the morning than at any other time, were startled from their heavy slumbers by the fusilade of hail and rain, accompanied by wind and lightning. One man, who is an optimist, got out of bed just to see the hail.

"It was the finest hail storm I have ever seen," said this individual with a glow of enthusiasm, Thursday.

The weather man is more peculiarly-affected during the month of April than any other month of the calendar. One minute he says, "Let 'er rain," and there comes a downpour. Then he'll say, "Presto! Let the sun shine." Sure enough Old Sol peeps from behind a cloud and mud and water disappear almost like magic.

At noon the sun shone with a brilliance that reflected the kindness of nature in the hearts of all humanity. Suddenly, a strong wind swooped down from the south and west, and with it rode Jupiter Pluvius. Then the rain came. As the wind died away it fell in veritable torrents. The lower sections of streets were flooded and even in the higher quarters of the city the gutters were filled to overflowing. Some wind and lightning accompanied the storm, but no particular damage has been reported aside from the flooding of some cellars where the drainage proved unequal to the demand.

The flood covered the tracks of the street railway company on west Center street to such a depth that the operation of the cars was stopped for some time.

The rainfall amounted to 1.21 inches, the fall considering the duration of the storm being among the heaviest in the last two years.

Clerical Ambiquity.

"It looks pretty bad," said the bishop to the captain.

"Couldn't be much worse, bishop," replied Foretopp.

Half an hour later the steamship was diving under the waves as if she were a submarine and leaking like an old door.

"Looks worse, I think, captain," said the bishop.

"We must trust in Providence now, bishop," answered Foretopp.

"Oh, I hope it has not come to that!" gasped the bishop.

Chicago, April 30. — Three lives were lost in an electrical storm accompanied by a gale of wind that approached the fury of a cyclone, which swept over the city from the west. As a result the city was cut off from direct outside communication for nearly two hours.

A cottage at Seventy-ninth street and Ellis avenue was blown down by the wind, and it was reported to the police that two men were killed and a woman and a child injured.

Telegraph and telephone wires were cut down on all sides of the city. It was the most complete prostration of wire service in 12 years. The Western Union reported that all its wires were cut off as though by a flash of lightning. Communication with the east was established slowly and by circuitous routes.

Traffic was impeded on surface and elevated lines and suburban trains were delayed. Two inches of rain fell here and in neighboring cities. Many persons were injured by flying boards and knocked down by streetcars and wagons.

TESTIFIES FOR SON

General Hains Describes Captain's Many Eccentricities.

Flushing, N. Y., April 30.—An affecting scene was presented at the trial of Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., when General Hains, retired, the aged father of the defendant, related with suppressed emotion the incidents of his son's life from boyhood to the time when, driven to madness by his wife's alleged infidelity, he shot down the man who, the defense contends, was the cause of it.

Beginning with the boy's tendency to nightmares and general excitability during his earlier years, the old general traced his career through the campaigns of the Spanish-American war when he fought under his father in Porto Rico, and was "always in the way on the firing line."

The harrowing scenes which ensued at the family conference, held after the captain's return from an eight-months' tour of duty in the Philippines, were depicted by the general in a trembling voice.

Dugan, when confronted by Bennett, replied: "I do not know that I did it. If I did, I am surprised."

Tulsa, Okla., April 30.—A new federal grand jury was called to meet in Tulsa on Monday, May 10, to investigate the Muskogee land fraud cases, in which the names of Governor C. N. Haskell and a half dozen other prominent Oklahomans were recently involved.

When the indictments against these men were quashed on April 10 last it was on the ground the indictments were faulty; that they were returned by a grand jury composed of 23 men under the federal law, instead of by a jury of 16, as provided by the Arkansas law, which was held to be in force in old Indian Territory by federal enactment at the time the alleged frauds were committed.

EUNUCH SWINGS FROM BRIDGE

Deposed Sultan's Favorite Son Said to Have Been One of Leading Conspirators In Recent Uprising of the Troops—Siege of Hadjin Raised by Timely Arrival of Troops and Missionaries Report All Well and In No Danger.

Constantinople, April 30.—The constitutionalists have lost no time in bringing the conspirators in the recent rising to trial. The military court, sitting in the war office, condemned about 250 prisoners to death, and they were executed. Nadir Pasha, the second eunuch of the palace, was hanged at dawn on the Galata bridge, and his great body was viewed by thousands.

The national assembly, which met under the presidency of Said Pasha, decided that the Sultan Mehmed V should take the oath of constitution within a week. The assembly also ratified the deportation of Abdul Hamid to Salonikl.

It is alleged that the chief authors of the recent mutiny were Abdul Hamid's favorite son, Prince Mehmed Burpan Eddine, Rear Admiral Said Pasha, son of Kiamil Pasha, the former grand vizier, and Nadir Pasha, who were engaged for a long time prior to the rising in corrupting the troops. The two former have fled.

MISSIONARIES ARE SAFE

Constantinople, April 30. — A welcome message was received from the town of Hadjin, in the province of Adana, where five American women missionaries have been alone with thousands of refugees who sought safety there from bands of Moslems seeking to put them to the sword. Hadjin has withstood a siege for the past eight days, and the missionaries have been sending out frantic appeals for help. The message was from Miss Lambert, the daughter of Bishop Lambert. It said: "With the arrival of the troops, the disorders in and about the city have ceased, and we are all safe and well."

The Turkish cabinet has taken up the consideration of the situation in Adana and neighboring districts. The new governor general, Mustafa Zihni, is due to arrive at the town of Adana today. He has been instructed to take the most energetic measures to re-establish order and to relieve the sufferers.

Communication Interrupted.

Beirut, April 30.—The telegraph lines are now interrupted and little news was received here from the districts where the terrible disorders have prevailed for the past two weeks. Although an enormous number of refugees have reached Latakia, the governor, who has been getting troops together, claims that he is perfectly able to protect the city, but this is doubtful, particularly if the British warship Diana, now there, is withdrawn. Refugees are flocking to all the cities, and it is imperative that they receive immediate aid, as thousands are starving.

SAYS CONSUMER IS OUT IN COLD

Senator Rayner Attacks Payne-Aldrich Measure.

WANTS TARIFF FOR REVENUE

Would Place Heaviest Burdens on Luxuries and Give Ample Protection to American Workmen — Goes After Trusts as Principal Beneficiaries of New Revenue Bill and Asserts They Never Give People a Share of Their Ill-Gotten Gains.

Washington, April 30. — Senator Rayner of Maryland delivered an address denouncing the Payne-Aldrich tariff measure as failing to provide revenue and protecting the industries controlled by trusts rather than giving any relief to the country. He declared free trade is impracticable in this country and asserted that not a single Democratic senator would vote for it if presented to him in a bill.

He frequently entered upon oratorical flights and concluded with a series of condemnations of the so-called trusts of the country. He declared his belief in incidental protection in order to maintain the wages of American workingmen.

"I have never believed in free trade between this country and any other countries," Mr. Rayner said. "I think from every practical standpoint it is perfectly preposterous to talk about it. I think the country would vote such a proposition down almost with practical unanimity. I believe in custom house taxation and I do not believe any other system will ever take its place to the satisfaction of the American people. Free trade is not the question before us, and no amount of reproach and adjectives will deter me from stating what the question really is."

Reading from the Democratic platforms of 1876 and 1892, Mr. Rayner said they embodied his party's axiom, "and that is," he added, "that we have no constitutional power to collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue." The pending tariff bill, he declared, should be entitled "A bill to encourage the industries of the United States and for no other purpose." He did not believe it would add very much to our present revenue collections. He characterized the whole framework of the measure as protection and revenue afterwards. If he had the framing of a tariff bill he said he would levy the lowest tax possible upon the necessaries of life and the highest tax possible upon the luxuries, and "would protect American labor so as to maintain at all times the standard of American wages. Throughout the whole bill I would look out for the consumer. You may examine this bill, outside of the free list, and it is almost impossible to discover the consumer in any of its complicated schedules."

Combats Idea.

Mr. Rayner combatted the idea that the great corporations of the country benefit the consumers by utilizing economies or increased wages. On the other hand, he declared of the trusts:

"They raise prices, they limit production, they lower wages, they contract the demand for labor, they throttle competition, they monopolize the wealth of the land, they withdraw it from the channels of circulation, and when they are driven from one state they obtain their franchises in another and then return with insolence to pursue their calling in the place from which they are banished. I can look around in my own state and observe that whenever a new enterprise is started that comes in conflict with them they sweep down upon it as the cormorant does upon his prey, and that their rapacity is never appeased so long as a spark of vitality is left in any competitor that crosses their path.

"I do not find within this bill a line or sentence that weakens their grasp upon the commerce of the country. On the contrary, they show their hateful front in almost every schedule of this bill.

"As against them, if I had the opportunity in the framing of a tariff bill, I would open the ports of entry to the markets of the world. It is said that if we do this, we will interfere with other industries that are competing with them. There is hardly a word of truth in that statement, because they tolerate no rivalry and permit no interference."

Senator Nelson of Minnesota made an earnest plea for the admission of lumber free of duty. His assertions aroused a quite general discussion, which was participated in by Senators Hale, Warren, Carter, Clapp, McLaurin, McCumber, Elkins, Aldrich and Gallagher.

BRIDE OF TWO MONTHS SHOOTS HERSELF

Mrs. William Massie Tries To Take Her Life.

INFLICTS A WOUND IN RIGHT BREAST

Bullet Passes Through Right Lung. Mrs. Massie Is but Eighteen Years of Age—She Uses a Thirty-Two Caliber Revolver—Attempts Suicide at Home on Cottage Street.

Mrs. William B. Massie, eighteen years old, a bride of a little over two months, shot herself in the right breast with suicidal intent at her home on Cottage street, Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. She can not survive.

Mrs. Massie was found shortly after shooting herself with a thirty-two-caliber revolver. "I have a reason for doing it," she murmured when asked why she wanted to take her own life, "but I won't tell."

At 3 o'clock that afternoon, Mrs. Massie had sunk into unconsciousness, and those at her bedside said she was barely breathing.

Dr. F. B. Sawyer was called at a late hour.

Mrs. Massie was formerly Miss Bertha Porter, daughter of William Porter. She was married to William B. Massie, aged twenty-four years, son of William A. Massie, February 20, Justice Charles E. Gompf performed the ceremony. The young husband is employed as a stone quarryman.

Mrs. Massie's attempt at suicide is believed to have been due to jealousy. Wednesday evening, she had trouble with a woman, whom she thought had been in the company of her husband, but who, it is said, was with her husband's brother instead.

THE AMATEUR GARDEN.

A few weeks ago Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, won notoriety by urging and leading the movement to utilize the vacant lots and nooks and corners in and adjacent to the city by planting them in potatoes for the benefit of the poor and the many families out of work at the time. The cost of living was high and many were in compulsory idleness, and Mayor Pingree's movement, which was laughed at in the beginning, proved to be of great value to many worthy people. It not only assisted in replenishing many lean larders, but it taught families how to do more than one kind of work, the value of knowing more, and something of the spirit, of independence which cultivation of the soil gives above all other labor.

The high cost of living, price of vegetables, etc., seem to have the effect of stirring many households to action in the matter of home production. More than the usual number of small gardens and miniature farms are being established in backyards and lots, and many amateur gardeners are wielding the hoe and the rake and cultivating visions of fresh lettuce, onions, radishes, beets and the like.

Doubtless many of them will be doomed to disappointment but the pleasure of anticipation will be worth more than the cost, and the outdoor exercise may be the means of saving enough in doctor bills to pay for vegetables the whole year. The belief that one has a garden is worth money. It affords pleasure and healthful labor and in anticipation of results to be achieved, and in many instances these amateur gardens will be successful in reducing the cost of the family commissary department. Let everybody have a garden who can.—Nashville American.

SEVEN-HOUR DAY FOR THE WORKERS

Organized Labor Is Behind a Movement To Shorten Work Days.

Organized labor throughout the United States has started a move for the seven hour day in all lines of work.

Harry D. Thomas, secretary of the Cleveland United Trades and Labor council and of the Ohio Federation of Labor, announced the other day that the agitation for an eight hour day was only the beginning of the large movement.

The ultimate purpose is to reduce the hours of labor until all men are employed, even if it is necessary to reduce the working time to one hour a day. Only in this way, Thomas says, can workingmen share with their employers in the benefits of time and labor saving machinery.

SENATOR SCOTT A STAND-PATTER

So He Declares in the Senate This Afternoon

HE IS OPPOSED TO TARIFF CHANGES

On Coal, Lumber, Iron, Hides, Wool and Pottery

Not Only Takes This Stand in the Interests of West Virginia but Also of the Entire South—Lower Tariffs He Says, Means Lower Wages, and the Republican Party Can Not Afford the Latter

Washington April 27 —In a vigorous speech Senator Scott of West Virginia announced to the senate his opposition to any changes in existing tariff rates on coal lumber iron and steel hides wool oil and pottery In these things his state is greatly interested and he declared he would stand for no reduction in any of these schedules and would work and vote against it

In declaring that he was a 'stand patter' Scott said that he had the official support of the legislature of West Virginia It was not only for the interests of West Virginia however that he demanded the retention of the present rates but for the South and the union as a whole

'The Southland' Scott said sees ahead of her nothing but prosperity under a protective tariff At no distant day you will find the people of the South sending to congress members who will be the strongest protectionists this country has ever produced'

Charity at Home

"Removing the duty on coal Scott declared would render a half dozen of our western states dependent on a foreign country for a necessity of life would close down coal mines in many states would depopulate many towns dependent upon this industry would ruin numbers of American coal operators I believe in charity which begins at home

Protesting against the proposition to cut the duty on lumber in half or put it on the free list Senator Scott said that there would then be nothing left for the lumber men but cut wages

Are we ready to say to the lumbermen all over the country The Republican party stands for a cut in their wages of fifty to sixty per cent' Scott asked He said that in association of manufacturer outside the United State Steel corporation with whose members he was well acquainted and whose word was as good as their bond had declared that even a slight reduction in the Dingley rates on iron and steel would enable the foreign manufacturers to use American markets as a dumping ground for their products with the inevitable result of lower wages here

For Free Hides

Speaking for free hides the senator said that the cattle raiser in West Virginia had informed him that this would mean a loss to them of from two to four dollars on every beef they sent to market and one had told him that it would cost him $1,200 on his next shipment

In urging a duty on petroleum the senator said

'The people of West Virginia demand a duty on oil They do not hold that the Standard Oil company is a great monster devouring alike the living and the dead They see the development this corporation has brought to the state and they desire that it shall be fairly treated Today there are 13 000 oil well in West Virginia being operated and producing 25 000 barrels of oil per day at a value of $1 78 a barrel Today under the assessment laws of my state seventy six million dollars worth of oil land is paying taxes nine thousands men are directly employed in this business and they are among the richest the most wide awake and progressive citizens we have in the state of West Virginia

Expert Opinion

Is not their testimony worth that of those who would scarcely know an oil well if the saw one They know that the Standard Oil company buys their oil Here the transaction begins and there it ends They know that the Standard is in the market to buy the best grades of oil at the cheapest figures wherever it can They know that it makes but little if any difference to the Standard Oil company whether there is a duty on oil or not And these independent oil operators know that the placing of crude oil on the free list means death and destruction to their business

'It may be the senator said 'that the Standard Oil company should be punished If it has done anything wrong If it has broken the laws punish it but do not ruin the independent oil operator of West Virginia and of the United States in an attempt to reach the Standard Oil company I do not propose to let an populistic howlings influence me in what I conceive to be my duty in regard to taking care of the independent oil producers of my state

STARTLING CLAIM OF ROSE STOKES

Made Before a Men's Club in East Boston.

Socialism Is the Remedy Offered by the Wife of the Millionaire Socialist—Claims Women Can Not Earn Enough in the Factories, Shops and Business Places To Feed and Clothe Themselves.

Boston, April 26.—"There are fifty thousand New York women on the streets who are selling their souls for bread," is a statement made here by Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, which today is giving Boston clergymen food for though, "and these are not wicked women," she continued, in her defense of Socialism before an East Boston's men club, to which she spoke last night. "These women," she continued, "cannot earn enough in the factories, shops and business places to get enough money to properly feed and clothe themselves and the result is inevitable.

"There must be a new state rise out of the rottenness which exists today, and Socialism will wipe out the evil conditions. There are people who say Socialism means free love. That is false and cannot be proven. That there are divorces among Socialists is true, but that seems to be common in all sources. You would certainly destroy all parties if you weeded out the men who divorced their first wives."

sufficient recruits to start a civil war. Cheftek will immediately begin the pursuit of this fugitive army and a bloody battle is imminent.

The cabinet of Tewfik Pasha is still in office. Its resignation, handed in yesterday, was withdrawn at the request of Cheftak Pasha. Just as soon as more urgent matters are disposed of, a new ministry will be appointed.

Religious Ceremony Wednesday.

Today's action is almost wholly political in its significance. At sunrise tomorrow, unless unforeseen circumstances intervene, the formal and religious ceremony will take place according to the old Turkish custom. At this ceremony the proclamation, officially announced by parliament, today, will be read and the new reign will date from tomorrow.

Among those of the sultan's household who were arrested during the night was Prince Saba-Ed-Din, the sultan's nephew. He is charged with active participation in the recent reactionary attempt and will undoubtedly be severely dealt with. All the women of Abdul's harem were scattered to the old palace seraglio and to various places in the country.

The soldiers at Erzerum, in the northeastern part of Asia Minor, have arrested fifty of their officers and sent them to Trebizond, on the Black sea. The despatches mentioning the arrest do not make it clear whether the officers are guilty of being reactionaries, or whether the soldiers themselves are reactionaries and have mutinied against the Young Turks. It is feard that the latter is true, in which event a punitive expedition will be despatched to the scene at once.

Thirty-Three Years.

Abdul Hamid's deposition today ends a reign of nearly thirty-three years, he having ascended the throne on August 31, 1876. He succeeded his elder brother, Murad V., whose deposition was based on the grounds of insanity. Murad died August 29, 1904.

Murad's deposition was the work of conspirators, in which Abdul played a leading part. He was accused of the greatest cruelties and atrocities, though no relief was furnished in the long reign that has just come to an end.

No more cunning and despotic ruler ever sat on the Turkish throne than Abdul, and under his reign the empire has been held back, the populace downtrodden and a score of memorable crimes and massacres committed that will always make his reign known as one of the darkest in the country's history.

As a grafter, Abdul is said to have been the most accomplished in Europe. He levied toll everywhere, and those of his official family who would not work with him in his nefarious schemes, soon found themselves out of power, and they still continued to cross the sultan, their lives were forfeited under one pretext or another.

A chapter of palace murders is laid to Abdul's reign that makes the crime careers of other rulers appear as innocent diversions.

Abdul's health is poor. If he escapes the assassins, he will probably be permitted to live in peace on a government annuity.

Reported a Prisoner.

London, April 27.—The Exchange Telegraph's Constantinople correspondent says that Abdul Hamid is now a prisoner in the palace of Cheraghan, on the Bosphorus. It says that during the night a body of Young Turks entered the Yildiz Kiosk, arrested all the remaining members of the household and took Abdul a prisoner.

The Exchange's report has not been confirmed by any of the other news agencies with representatives in Constantinople.

Account of Massacres.

London, April 27.—A despatch today from Adana gives a graphic account of the first five days of the rioting and massacres in that city, detailed by the Rev. Herbert Adams Gibbons, a missionary from Hartford, Connecticut.

"Early last Wednesday, April 14, while I was at the market," Mr. Gibbons said, "I noticed that the Armenians were closing their shops and hurrying to their homes. An Armenian and a Turk had been killed during the night, and the corpses were paraded through the streets. The people became greatly inflamed at the sight of these corpses and crowds began to assemble, armed with revolvers, clubs, knives and axes.

"By 11 o'clock the rioting was getting under full swing. The military commander of Adana was with me in the market. Had he had the requisite courage he might have suppressed the trouble in its incipiency, but he was either a coward or in sympathy with the uprising and permitted it to go on unchecked. He kept in hiding for two days.

"William Chambers, field secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and I went to the telegraph office to summon the British consul, encountering the bodies of the slain at every step. Two Armenians were killed in the telegraph office before our eyes. We made representations to the Vali, but he said he could do nothing. He evidently was afraid of his life.

"In the afternoon the situation grew decidedly worse. The Armenians retreated to their homes, which they turned into fortresses. For two days they were able to beat off the attackers, but the fanatics finally won the upper hand and Adana became a hell. The bazaars were looted, and set on fire. There was incessant shooting and burning in every section of the town. Moslems from the neighboring towns poured in to whet their appetites on the scenes of carnage.

Gives Arms to Rioters.

"The Vali actually distributed arms to the rioters, alleging that they were Turkish reserves and were to be used in suppressing the uprising.

Major Daughty-Wylie, the British vice consul at Mersine, commanded the Vali to supply him with a body of troops and went to the railroad end of the town and succeeded in preventing the villagers from coming into Adana. It was while in this work that he was shot and seriously wounded.

"Thursday, Daniel Miner Rogers and Henry Maurer, American missionaries, were killed under treacherous circumstances. Friday the Armenians gave up the fight. The town is in a pitiable condition. Corpses lie scattered everywhere, and it is impossible to estimate the number of dead. Graves are being dug in the Turkish cemeteries. They are little more than trenches into which the hundreds of victims are thrown."

New York, April 26.—Shamed by his arrest and imprisonment, Raymond Dominguez, fifty-five a wealthy importer of tobacco, is dead today, a victim of heart disease. He was arrested yesterday on a charge of expectorating in the face of a passerby on Fifth avenue and when placed in custody he became so excited at the police station protesting innocence, he dropped dead.

THE LIFE EXTENDED.

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday-School Lesson for May 2 is "Paul's First Missionary Journey—Cyprus." Acts 13:1-12.

One explanation given for the present amazing interest of laymen in the missionary cause is that they are not content with a small life, circumscribed by the bounds of their own secular business. The spirit of the times impels them to seek a cosmopolitan influence. There has been preached the doctrine of the strenuous life and the doctrine of the simple life. Now, more popular than either, we hear the doctrine of the extended life.

This twentieth century mood chords with the spirit of the early Christian church. Restless and outreaching, the first disciples sought to bear their message as widely as they could. They early caught a vision of a church life which was one, whether expressed at home or abroad. They who abode by the stuff should share in the honor and reward equally with those who went forth to fight. The missionary enterprise was the church's enterprise, and not the peculiar undertaking of the missionary himself. This appears plainly in the story recorded in the Book of Acts, and it depicts the normal condition for a church.

Won and Winning.

The first formal and organized missionary expenditure of the Christian church is related in this lesson. Significantly, the story begins with a statement of the condition of the church at Antioch, which had become a center of Christian activity, though it in itself was the result of missionary endeavor. It may yet again happen, as it happened in those early days and often since, that the new centers created by aggressive extension work became in turn the main headquarters of Christian power and influence. Antioch had a strong church, with prophets and teachers. It was a representative company of believers, numbering both the high and the humble. On its roll were such distinguished names as Saul and Barnabas and Simeon and Lucius, and the foster-brother of Herod the Tetrarch. The last named indicates how one man may follow folly and his brother seek wisdom.

The Antioch church was, at home, strong in the missionary spirit. This is the big concern of present-day Christendom. Once Christians prayed for open doors in the pagan world. Now there are more open doors than the church is willing to enter. The one great problem of Christian extension today is the problem of the home church; her interest in the broader work, her devotion and her spirit of sacrifice. One may read many signs that the providential awakening of the non-Christian world, and the wide-flung doors of opportunity, are being followed by a widespread moving upon the hearts of Christian people by the Spirit of God, so that the consciousness of Christendom is being aroused to the meaning of these new times.

A few days ago there met in Toronto the first National Missionary congress ever assembled anywhere. Forty-two hundred strong men, representing every part of the dominion and every walk in life, came together to consider what is Canada's duty as a nation toward the evangelization of the whole world. A similar congress is projected for the United States, to be held in St. Louis next March. Such facts as these deserve to be written in the same category with the annals of the missionary movement that began at the Antioch church.

Some Stnt Men.

No more important task ever engages a church's thought than the selection of her missionaries. It used to be a somewhat casual matter. Whoever was moved to offer himself was accepted for foreign service. Today the great denominations are more particular in the choice of their foreign ambassadors than are the great nations. The churches can better afford to place in their biggest metropolitan pulpits second-rate men than they can afford to send such men to the non-christian world. The Antioch church had a wholesome sense of the gravity of its undertaking when it obeyed the call to set apart Barnabas and Saul for foreign service.

Out of the heart of this strong and strategic church were plucked its two leading members, that they might go forth on a mission. It was a call of God. Then, as now, the call came to the picked men. Only such are qualified for missionary service. This is no mere career where men may find a life work and an interesting occupation. It is a mission, reserved only for those who have felt the constraining impulse of the Divine Spirit.

That Saul should become a missionary was written in his very character. He had the imperial vision and the pioneer heart. He himself expressed his deep purpose when he said: "Being ambitious to preach the gospel not where Christ was already named, lest I should build on another man's foundation." Most of us know noble spirits today possessed by the same ambition.

A Diversified Force.

It takes many forms of ability to do complete missionary work. This first company consisted of Saul and Barnabas and John Mark, the last filling the role of reporter and general assistant. The present-day missionary propaganda has not yet got to the point of sending out a journalistic historian of contemporary missionary effort for the sake of the church at home. Thus early began the missionary practice of a diversity of effort. Even as an army has many forms or service—infantry, cavalry, artillery, signal corps, engineering corps—so the modern missionary advance has many lines of approach. There is the preaching missionary, the teaching missionary, the healing missionary, the mechanic missionary, and the author missionary, all seeking the same end by various routes. This is wisdom. Even when a frontal attack would fail, victory may be accomplished by a flank movement. There is such a thing as missions by indirection. This is a branch of missionary science as yet largely undeveloped.

After High and Low.

A round-the-world journey is a mere episode in these days of travel facilities, being very much less hazardous than the expedition which this first missionary force undertook, although the latter occupies very small space on our big maps. Later on we shall see what was involved in Paul's many travels in the way of personal hardship and danger. From Antioch the missionaries went down to the coast, embarking at Seleucia for Cyprus, Salamis being their point of landing. Thence they journeyed overland some one hundred and fifty miles to Paphos, where the particular incident of the lesson occurred.

The Roman proconsul, Sergius Paulus, desired to hear Saul and Barnabas. The latter were quick to perceive the advantage of reaching the official and influential classes, even as modern missionaries have been. Canada has lately seen the tremendous power of having as a Christian leader a missionary advocate, Sir Andrew Frazer, for thirty-seven years an eminent servant of the crown in India, latterly lieutenant governor of Bengal. We cannot for an instant conceive of Saul's overlooking the common people. To them he was bound to go, following the fashion of his Master. Yet he was no demagogue, and as a man of the world he realized that the gospel belongs in the palace as well as in the peasant's hut.

A Fighting Missionary.

The proconsul was too big to be allowed to fall into the hands of this new religion without the most desperate efforts on the part of the forces of error. Whoever undertakes to bring in the day of truth and righteousness must expect to see considerable hard fighting. Indeed, every reformer and pioneer and apostle of the truth needs to be a first-class fighting man. Saul filled this bill. When Elymas the Sorcerer tried to dissuade the proconsul from the way, Saul turned upon him in the awfulness of righteous anger. It is not advised by scriptures than men be not angry. Certain forms of anger are even commended. In this instance it is to be noted that the record runs that Saul, "filled with the Holy Ghost, fastened his eyes on" the sorcerer, and proceeded to arraign him in speech that would be deemed highly improper in many a placid, conventional pulpit. "O full of all guile and all villainy, thou son of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord? Now behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell upon him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand." That incident compelled attention and astonishment, and turned many to faith.

Innocuous, spineless, sugar-coated saints have no place in missionary endeavor. Such men as Dr. Dubose, of Soochow, who for more than forty years, in season and out of season, has led the fight against opium. When one by one all shrank from this seemingly impossible task, he held to it with the doggedness of a southern warrior; and now, lo, he has lived to see the day of triumph. I was reminded of Saul's burning words to Elymas when an incident was related to me as I once set off for the interior of China without interpreter or military escort. The parting counsel of my missionary friend was, "Remember that the Chinese cannot swim, and also that if you either thrash or make ridiculous the leader of a mob, the temper of the latter will at once change."

The story told in illustration concerned another friend of mine, a man of the mildest manners ordinarily. He was conducting services in a Chinese street chapel, and a native preacher was speaking, when a gang of ruffians attempted to break up the meeting. They were headed by a huge fellow of considerable daring, and they made straight for the speaker. The missionary, bidding the native pastor to continue his preaching no matter what happened, suddenly darted down from the platform as the rowdy neared it, seized the latter by the scruff of the neck, ran him down the aisle through his amazed companions, and literally kicked him out the door. In Chinese fashion, the mob was so amused at the sudden turn of events that they allowed the meetings to proceed without molestation thereafter. Saul's course in the case of the sorcerer reinforces the wise man's counsel: "Boldness, yet more boldness, and ever boldness."

ing counsel of my missionary friend was, "Remember that the Chinese cannot swim, and also that if you either thrash or make ridiculous the leader of a mob, the temper of the latter will at once change."

The story told in illustration concerned another friend of mine, a man of the mildest manners ordinarily. He was conducting services in a Chinese street chapel, and a native preacher was speaking, when a gang of ruffians attempted to break up the meeting. They were headed by a huge fellow of considerable daring, and they made straight for the speaker. The missionary, bidding the native pastor to continue his preaching no matter what happened, suddenly darted down from the platform as the rowdy neared it, seized the latter by the scruff of the neck, ran him down the aisle through his amazed companions, and literally kicked him out the door. In Chinese fashion, the mob was so amused at the sudden turn of events that they allowed the meetings to proceed without molestation thereafter. Saul's course in the case of the sorcerer reinforces the wise man's counsel: "Boldness, yet more boldness, and ever boldness."

HINKLIN'S STORY OF THE JACKSON KILLING

Jackson Does Not Raise Knife in Threatening Way.

INTERVAL BETWEEN THREE SHOTS FIRED

First Shot Fired by a Hunter in the Vicinity—Last Two Shots Fired by Curry in Quick Succession—Jury in Curry Murder Trial Is Excused Until Monday.

Upper Sandusky, April 21.—[Special.]—That the jurors, the majority of whom are farmers, should be excused and given Saturday in which to attend their duties, was the sentiment expressed by Judge Daniel Babst, of Crestline, when he adjourned the Hamilton R. Curry murder trial here, Friday afternoon. By agreement of counsel court was adjourned until 8:30 o'clock Monday morning.

Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice, who left here, Friday evening, and went to Columbus, states that the state's evidence will be completed by Tuesday. He thinks that the case will go to the jury by Thursday night.

Friday afternoon's session was largely-attended. Attorney John Egan took up the cross-examination of David Cusic, who proved an exceptionally strong witness for the state.

John H. Hinklin, another employe of the Erie Railroad company, was then called by the state. He said he was at the "hump" at the time the defendant went over to make the arrest, and that he later heard a shot, then two more shots.

It is the purpose of the state to show that the first shot fired was that of some hunter in the vicinity about the time of Jackson's killing.

Hinklin said the interval between the first shot and the other two shots was but a minute. The second shots were fired in rapid succession

On cross examination, witness admitted not having mentioned the occurrence of the first shot before the coroner at Marion, and acknowledged that he had talked over the testimony with Attorney Parker and other attorneys for the defense one evening this week in Mr. Parker's office. He would not attempt to name any one to whom he had talked regarding the first shot previous to the meeting in Mr. Parker's office. He declared that the first shot and last two shots were not made by the same gun.

Floyd L. Bensley, a clerk in the transfer office in Marion, was then called and examined by Mr. Parker. His testimony was unimportant.

John Ward, of Huntington, Indiana, a brakeman employed by the Erie, stated that he was beside his caboose in the Erie yards the day Jackson was killed. He saw the defendant step quickly to the body of Jackson after the shots, but was unable to say whether Mrs. Jackson or Curry arrived at the body first

The witness stated that Curry picked up something and went toward the "hump" on a run. On cross-examination, Ward was confronted with an alleged statement, made by him to the coroner, to the effect that he had seen Jackson face Detective Curry with a corn knife or what was supposed to be a corn knife, raised. He admitted having sworn to that statement.

"No, sir, he held his arm like this," replied the witness, holding his right arm up just a short distance.

"No, he did not have his hand like that," insisted Ward. "I tell you he had his hand like this." And Ward faced the jury showing his hand and arm barely uplifted.

Ward was the last witness for the day.

The Trial Resumed.

Upper Sandusky, O., April 26.—[Special.]—When the Hamilton R Curry trial was resumed, at 8:50 o'clock this morning, after an adjournment lasting two days, the jurors appeared fresh and attentive The attendance was small.

The state expects to rest its case by this evening, and the defense will begin the introduction of its evidence, Tuesday morning, in the event that the prosecution winds up its testimony, today.

New witnesses are here from Toledo and Columbus. The Toledo witnesses are subpoenaed by the defense, and are presumed to be character witnesses.

Reuben Greenland, an Erie switchman, was the first witness, today He related the same story that he told to the coroner, and it contained nothing of importance either way.

Attorney John Egan, counsel for the state, referred to Curry as Officer Curry. Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice objected to the term before the jury, and Judge Daniel Babst, addressing the jurors said that they should not regard the defendant in the light of being an officer of the law.

On cross-examination, Witness Greenland was forced to admit that he had been arrested several times, and that he had talked with attorneys for the prosecution with reference to the killing of Jackson by Curry.

The only other witnesses this morning, were William S. Lowmiller, Erie conductor, and Charles C. Dolan, a switchman. Their testimony was the same as that given at the coroner's inquest, that Curry shot Jackson twice and that he was falling when the second shot was fired. Both declared that Jackson did not have his hand upraised as if in the act of defending himself

When court adjourned for dinner, the state had nine other witnesses to examine.

Weapon Is Exhibited.

Upper Sandusky, April 27.—[Special.]—Court reopened, at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, with a small crowd in attendance, although the number of spectators gradually increased during the afternoon.

City Engineer George E. Dwyer was called by the state, and examined as to the location of what is known as the "hump," relative to the city of Marion and the cornfield, where the crime was committed. The defendant's attorneys declined to cross-examine the witness. The state then offered as exhibits all of Jackson's clothing worn the day of the crime, two empty shells and three loaded shells and Curry's revolver. At 1:20 o'clock the attorneys for the state announced that they would rest.

By request of the attorneys for the defense the court ordered a recess of ten minutes, that the defendant's counsel might hold a short consultation before presenting their side of the case. Court reopened at 1:50 o'clock, at which time Attorney D. R. Crissinger for the defense, informed the court that he wished to make a motion in the absence of the jury, whereupon the court ordered the jury to retire. Mr. Crissinger then asked that the state be compelled to decide which of the two shots its relied upon to sustain its case.

Prosecutor Justice stated that the state only wished to elect upon the shot that killed. The motion of the defense was overruled, and the jury ordered to return.

E. L. Owen was called as the first witness for the defense. His testimony was unimportant.

J. A. McDowell, a switchman in the Erie yards, was examined by Attorney F. E. Guthery. Witness saw Curry and Jackson holding a conversation in the cornfield, saw Curry pull out a paper supposed to be a warrant. Jackson struck the warrant from Curry's hand and a part of it blew over toward the north, where Jackson stepped over and picked it up. He next heard two shots fired, but could not see Curry, a cornshock obstructing his view. He saw Jackson fall. Mrs. Jackson was about fifteen feet from her husband when he was shot. The state did not cross-examine the witness.

Leo B. Larr, of Huntington, Indiana, testified that, after Curry arrived at the cornfield, some trouble occurred between Jackson and Curry; that Jackson got a corn-cutter and started for Curry, with the cornknife uplifted, when Curry fired the two shots. Jackson fell, and Mrs. Jackson and Curry went to the body, both reaching it about the same time. Curry picked something up and returned to the "hump." Mrs Jackson was about four feet from her husband when the two shots, which were very close together were discharged.

Prosecutor Charles L. Justice in cross-examination was unable to get Larr to stray from his original story, but brought out that the witness had been arrested in Huntington for robbery.

A. J. Sickle, a switchman, saw Curry and Jackson talking and then a skirmish, in which Curry took Jackson by the shoulders and Jackson escaped by slipping out of his coat. He next saw a puff of smoke from Curry's revolver, after which Curry returned to the "hump," at which time he told the witness to go over and see what he could do for Jackson, that he had to shoot him. Judge Babst ordered the declaration of Curry to the witness, "I had to shoot him," not to be considered by the jury

John T Coffet, another witness in the Erie yards in Marion testified that he saw Jackson run to a nearby cornshock and secure a cornknife He then advanced toward Curry with the cornknife held upright in his right hand. Jackson approached to within about sixteen feet of Curry in this manner Curry reached in his right-hand hippocket and removed his handkerchief placing it in his left hand, and then returned to the same pocket with his right hand and drew out the revolver, fired, and Jackson fell Curry according to Coffey, then approached near Jackson and secured the cornknife and returned to the "hump." Curry told the witness to telephone for the ambulance which he did He also asked that the switchman and engine crew take Jackson to the hospital as quickly as possible as he was badly injured Coffey told his story in a cool and deliberate manner, and although severely cross-examined by Attorney G. B. Seofield, at no time did he become in the least excited or confused, telling exactly the same story that he related on direct examination.

As it was found impossible to find some of the other witnesses for the defense at 1 o'clock, court adjourned until 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The defense expects to introduce all its testimony by tonight. Wednesday may be consumed in rebuttal The case will be submitted to the jury by Thursday.

The testimony of this morning's session was that of character witnesses, all of whom testified as to the good reputation of the defendant John Garner, of Winchester, Kentucky, Curry's former home, testified that he had known the prisoner a number of years. For twelve years, the witness said he had been mayor of Winchester and that he is now a member of the state board of equalization Other character witnesses for the defense were John DeWitte, Joseph Harrigan, V B Rule and John T Coffey of Cincinnati, Captain William P Myers of Norwich, which is a small town near Cincinnati, C E Strong, W W Sanders, J M Davidson Richard Burke, T J Osborne and George McKinley

John W Reading testified that Curry came to his father's grocery and used the telephone to summon himself up, and Constable I W Ulsh testified that Curry rode with him to the office of Justice Charles E Gompf Edward L Gray a farmer, was with Ulsh at the time

An Injunction.

Notice has been received of an injunction restraining the Marion county commissioners from selling the McKibben ditch in Richland township The ditch is a joint county ditch, and the injunction was obtained by Prosecuting Attorney Williamson, of Morrow county.

That's why we could not dispose of all of the fine "Buck" Stoves—when we sold out the C. W. McClain store last December.

We knew you would be more interested in getting a new kitchen stove about this time of the year—so we have held back until now to offer you the greatest stove bargains in years,

We don't want Stoves (even though they are the best on earth.)

We never did want them—but had to take them along with the balance of the McClain stocks—if we were to get back into the Dry Goods business.

Now they take up valuable room in our basement—and we are about the most anxious people to get rid of them that you ever saw.

And it pays "to buy when the other fellow wants to sell"—you know.

We are willing to pay you for taking these fifty some odd Cook Stoves and Ranges "off our hands."

We will pay you with what are probably the "greatest savings on perfect, new stoves—that any Ohio store ever offered." Here's a partial list—

McClain's $30 to $65 Ranges $19.95 to $42.75

McClain's $30 "Matchless" Steel Range now $19.95
McClain's $45 Buck Ranges now $29.83 & $32.75
McClain's $50 "Royal Gem" Steel Range $30 75
McClain's $50 Buck Ranges are now $37.60
McClain's $55 Buck Ranges are now $39.80
McClain's $65 Buck Ranges are now $42.75

McClain's $20 to $40 Cook Stoves $12.75 to $24.75

McClain's $20 Buck Cook Stoves now $12.75
McClain's $27.50 Buck Cook Stoves now $17.65
McClain's $32 Buck Cook Stoves now $18.75
McClain's $40 Buck Stoves now $24.75

"Buck" Stoves

will last a lifetime,

—and give you absolutely perfect, satisfactory service.

The "Buck" guarantee is the strongest given on any stove. But my! the stove itself is so perfectly and honestly constructed—the materials that enter it so "true by test"—that a purchaser never has to fall back upon his guarantee.

Then it behooves the person who wants a new Range or Cook Stove—to grasp this opportunity.

For the chance to get a "Buck"—at prices so greatly reduced—positively will not occur again.

ODD FELLOWS HOLD A NICE CELEBRATION

ANNIVERSARY OF THE ORGANIZATION

The Members of Kosciusko and Wayside Lodges and the Rebekahs Enjoy an Excellent Program of Music and Speaking—Attendance Very Large—Secret Order Items.

The ninetieth anniversary of the I. O. O. F. order was fittingly observed by Kosciusko Lodge, No. 58, and Wayside Lodge, 864, Monday night, in Wayside hall in the Concord block, on west Center street. The attendance of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs was large, the hall being filled almost to overflowing.

The program was opened with a piano selection by Miss Lottie Campbell, followed by a song, "Welcome," by the Rebekah quartet. Rev. H. H. Holverstott, invoked the divine blessing. After a selection by the orchestra, Homer E. Johnson delivered the welcome address. This was followed by a piano duet by Marie Johnson and Vesta Williamson. J. J. Crawley delivered the responsive address. Grant E. Mouser also spoke. Lucretia E. Cooper spoke on "Fraternity," and Mildred Hunter read an interesting paper on "Relations Between the Two Orders."

The committees on arrangements was composed of S. A. J. Williamson, F. C. Bacon and I. P. DeLong, Wayside Lodge, No. 864, and John Kilbury, Philip Schweinfurth and Roy Zachman, Kosciusko Lodge, No. 58.

The meeting of the Pythian Sisters, Monday evening, was largely attended, and aside from considerable routine business, arrangements were made for a social and dance to be held one week from Wednesday night.

The next regular meeting of the lodge will be held in two weeks.

HOTEL STEWARD STARVES TO DEATH

Dies for Lack of Food Amid an Abundance.

Akron, O., April 26.—Steward of a local hotel and surrounded by food, William M. Andrews starved to death today because on account of stomach trouble he was unable to eat. He was found dead in his room, beside him was this note:

"I am dying inch by inch, starving to death. I have not eaten a whole egg in a week."

For many years Andrews was a minister of the Reformed church. He gave up preaching nine years ago.

OLD POLITICAL FEUD IS FATAL

Rivals in Mississippi Village Settle Differences with Guns.

Meadville, Miss., April 27.—Cornelius Mitchell is dead and three other persons are wounded as a result of a six-handed shooting affray, the outgrowth of a political feud.

At a recent election Dr. A. M. Newman, formerly sheriff of this county, defeated the father of the young man killed in the contest for the office of chancery clerk. Feeling between the two factions became intense, and when Pritchard met Newman, weapons were quickly drawn and the firing began. Ingraham Pritchard came to the aid of his brother and three sons of Dr. Newman came to his assistance.

TAFT AT BIG GRANT DAY CELEBRATION

General's Son Is Also Guest of Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, April 27.— President Taft and members of his cabinet, with other well-known Americans, will be the guests tonight of the Union league at the annual celebration of Grant's birthday by the league. General Grant was born 87 years ago at Point Pleasant, O.

President Taft was met at the railroad station by the First City troop, Philadelphia's ancient organization, which claims the honor of escorting the city's distinguished guests. His progress through the city was marked by cheers. He was accompanied by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and Postmaster General Hitchcock.

Among the other guests at tonight's banquet will be General Frederick Dent Grant, son of the general. Vice President Sherman was expected, but an engagement to speak at the Grant day celebration in Brooklyn will prevent his attendance.

Tonight's banquet will surpass in brilliance any ever given by the league. The last time a president and cabinet members were guests of the league was during the McKinley administration. During President Taft's stay at the league the city will be notified of his presence by the flying of the presidential flag from the league staff.

SIXTEEN PERSONS HURT IN TORNADO

Many Buildings in Oklahoma Community Wrecked.

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 27.—Sixteen persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, in a tornado which destroyed a large part of the town of Centrahoma, near here. A child of Rev. E. J. Matthews is thought to be dying. Mrs. Matthews and her four other children also were injured.

Not a building in the town remained wholly intact after the storm. Twelve buildings, including the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches, were wrecked. The town contains about 500 inhabitants. Many of these are homeless as a result of the storm.

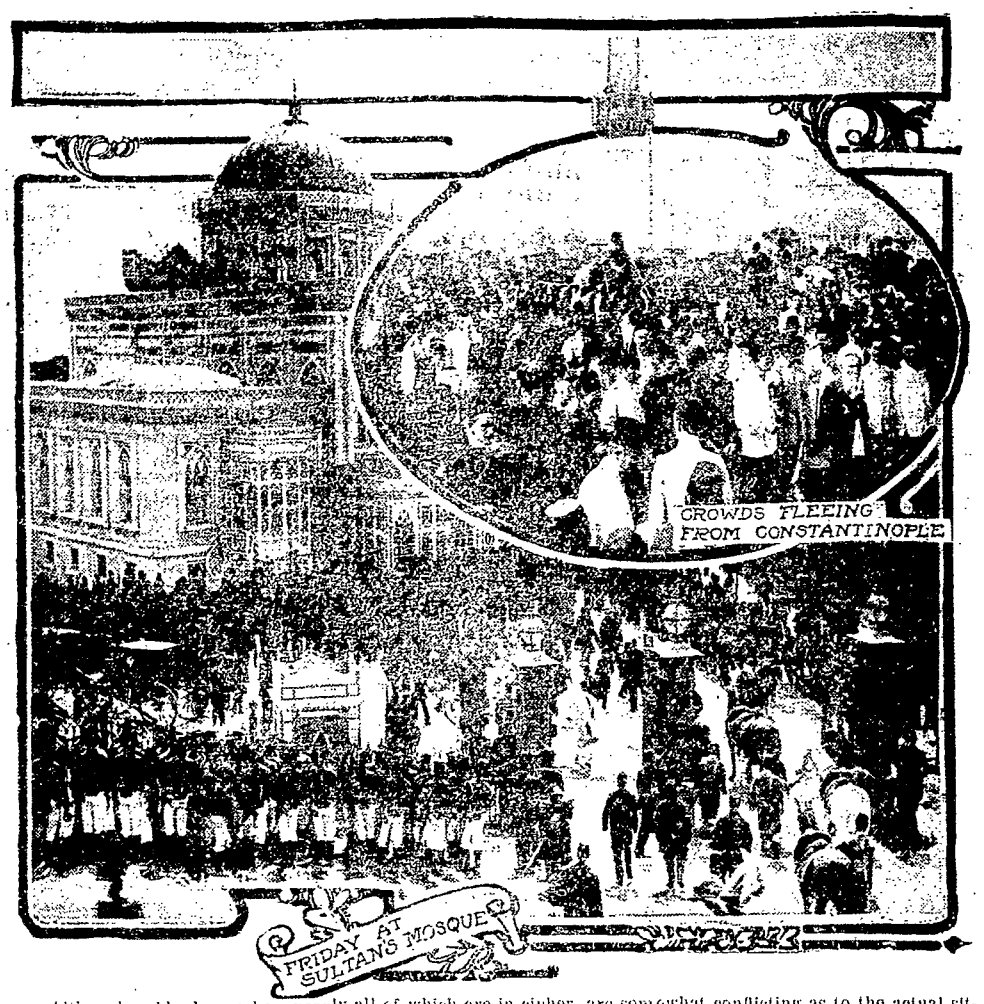
MOSQUE WHERE SULTAN WORSHIPS; CHAOTIC SCENE IN TURKISH CAPITAL



Although cable despatches, nearly all of which are in cipher, are somewhat conflicting as to the actual situation in the beleaguered capital of Turkey, it is generally believed that the bloody reign of the sultan, Abdul Hamid II., is drawing to a tragic close. "Give us the old man's head!" was the cry set up by the troops of the Third army corps when they set out from Saloniki for Constantinople, and the news of their approach struck terror to the heart of the tyrant ruler. The imperial yacht is ready, in command of Admiral Bucknam and Captain Ledbetter, the sultan's two American officers, to take him from the capital. Where he will go is a matter of conjecture. Since the reactionary revolution, set afoot by his own treachery, he has been shut up in the Yildiz kiosk, pleading for a compromise with the Liberals at one moment and begging his few faithful officers to resist the approach of the rebels at the next. The United States cruisers, North Carolina and Montana, are hurrying to Constantinople to protect American interests there.

CAPTAIN HAINS AS HE APPEARS NOW, HIS WIFE, JUDGE AND PLACE OF TRIAL

John F. McIntyre, chief counsel for Captain Peter C. Hains, the artillery officer on trial for the murder of William E. Annis, the alleged despoiler of his home, in outlining Hains' defense, made temporary insanity the keynote of the plea. It is contended that Captain Hains has on more than one occasion given evidence of an unsound mind when laboring under excitement. Numerous witnesses will testify to his strange conduct on these occasions. Alienists who have observed the defendant closely since he has been in jail will be placed on the stand to prove that he has frequently acted in an irrational manner during that time. If the jury finds that Hains was insane at the time of the tragedy and is now sane he will go free, but if he is found to be insane at the present time he likely will be sent to Matteawaa, where Harry Thaw is incarcerated. The United States has taken no cognizance of Hains' trial and will do nothing to affect his standing in the army until after the state has disposed of the charge against him. The accompanying picture of Hains shows him with a beard, which he has grown since he has been in jail.

TO INCREASE HEAD TAX ON IMMIGRANTS

Plan Proposed to Produce More Revenue.

Washington, April 27.—An increase to $12 in the head tax on immigrants has been proposed by Overman, Democrat, of North Carolina, as an amendment to the tariff bill in the senate. He said it would produce from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000 annually, and would protect American labor. Each immigrant now entering the country pays a tax of four dollars.

CATHEDRAL SHAKEN BY BOMB EXPLOSION

New Orleans Police Unable To Explain Mystery.

New Orleans, April 26. — The famous old St. Louis cathedral in Chartres street was shaken by an explosion, believed to have resulted from the placing of a bomb in the south tower of the building. The explosion, heard for many blocks and creating wild excitement in that section of the city, occurred when the church was practically empty of worshipers. A priest, a woman and a child were the only occupants of the building at the time, and none was injured.

One of the smaller altars in the front of the church was wrecked, handsome glass windows were broken and a quantity of plastering dislodged. The damage amounts to about $2,000.

The police express the belief that dissensions among some of a party of Italian workmen engaged in making repairs in the south tower of the church was responsible for the explosion. It is claimed that a charge of dynamite or some other high explosive was placed where it was thought it would send into eternity certain workmen against whom the enmity of the perpetrators existed, and that a miscalculation as to the time of the explosion was made.

INTERESTING BITS.

Since their incorporation the Kimberley mines have produced twelve tons of diamonds, valued at $5,000,000,000.

It is anticipated that the anti-opium crusade in China will be the means of opening up a new market for American tobacco.

During thirty years asbestos production Canada, which leads the world in the output of this mineral, has produced $20,000,000 worth.

Rat exterminators had to be engaged the other day by the Leeds, England, public library; the chief librarian was openly defied by a great rat, and the women assistants were in a constant state of terror.

It has been recently discovered that the Candelilla plant contains wax of an excellent quality and of sufficient proportion to make it extremely valuable.

Canada and the United States sent to the port of Leith 87,000 tons of wheat, are compared with 71,000 tons in 1907. The larger proportion of this wheat came from Canada.

There are ten women among the fifty commissioners that the government of Mexico has sent out for the purpose of studying the best methods of education in the different countries.

Deposits of pitchblende have been discovered in the old Cornish tin mines, while a new and quicker way has been found to extract radium from the pitchblende. The yield of radium from 200 tons of pitchblende is only a grain or so. If the pulverized ore can be made available by science in curing disease, the saving will be enormous.

Consul General G. Bie Ravndal, of Beirut, writes that a French syndicate has made a request through the ottoman Embassy at Paris for a concession to operate a motor-car service between Aleppo and Mosul.

The coal production of the world in 1907 was 1,209,200,000 short tons, of which amount the United States furnished 480,400,000 tons, Great Britain 300,000,000 tons, and Germany 226,800,000 tons.

The Viennese essayist, Dr. Stephanie Weiss Eder, writes: "Women are more exacting than men in so far as they demand good husbands, who are much rarer than good wives sought by men."

The petroleum production of the United States in 1908 has been estimated at between 175,000,000 and 180,000,000 barrels, an increase of 5 to 9 per cent., as compared with the production of 166,000,000 barrels in 1907.

It is reasonable to presume that the recent discovery of wax in the Candelilla plant will result in a new industry being established in Mexico which may equal that of the Guayule rubber; in some respects it has a decided advantage.

The prodigious crop of potatoes in Lincolnshire last season has put their price so low that farmers are feeding them to stock, finding them cheaper than the usual fodder. Large shipments of potatoes are being made to the United States.

It is estimated that there will be produced in Alberta this year 20,000,000 bushels of wheat, and that the western half of Saskatchewan will do at least as well. If the facilities were adequate to handle this grain at Vancouver, the whole of it would find its destination through that port.

Consul General Richard Guenther quotes a statement in the German press that a company has been formed at Mannheim, with a capital of seven million dollars, for the purpose of exporting a certain make of automobiles to the United States.

The world's total production of phosphate rock increased in 1907 to the amount of approximately 250,000 tons. The United States produced about 135,000 tons less than in the previous year. Algeria and Tunis about 320,000 tons more, and the South Sea Archipelago about 43,000 tons more.

In California one rarely sees a bank note. The money in circulation is all gold and silver. It is common to see a collector walking along the street with a bag of gold on his back. Curiously, the very weight of the money one person can hardly carry more than $10,000 in gold—often acts as a deterrent feature in embezzlement.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 26. — For the first time in years warships of Japan entered a Pacific coast port of the United States when the cruisers Aoya and Aso, comprising the Japanese training squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Hijieni, steamed into San Pedro. The Aso and Aoya are on a peaceful visit of some weeks' duration, which will take them to all of the principal ports on the Pacific coast. The two ships are prizes of the Russo-Japanese war.

In Which They Are Working When Cave-In Occurs.

Muncie, Ind., April 26.—Search Sunday for Albert Long, forty-seven, and A. O. McKibben, thirty-four, who mysteriously disappeared Saturday revealed the fact that both had been buried alive by a cave-in in a ditch they were digging. The body of Long was found in a standing position while that of McKibben was kneeling as though he had been laying tile when the bank suddenly caved in. Both leave families.

DISPENSES WITH STARTING RAIL

Wilbur Wright Makes Another Flight in Rome Today.

Rome, April 26.—Wilbur Wright today gave exhibition of his aeroplane in which he refrained from the use of the starting rails. Starting his motors as usual he maneuvered the aeroplane for about 150 yards along the ground and then shot it up into the air without apparent difficulty or accident.

This was the first time he has dispensed with the use of the starting apparatus on the continent.

EARL KRANER DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

The Young Man Travels Through a Number of Western States in Fruitless Endeavor To Regain Health. Is a Son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Kraner, of This City.

C. F. Kraner, of Olney avenue, received a telegram from San Jose, New Mexico, about 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, saying that his son, Earl, had died and that the remains will be brought to this city for interment. The message did not state the time of his death.

Mr. Kraner, had he lived until May 27, would have been twenty-nine years of age. He was born in Burlington, Iowa, but spent most of his boyhood days in this city. His death was caused by tuberculosis of which he had been a sufferer a number of years. He left Marion about eight years ago and traveled through California and other western states for a number of years in an endeavor to regain his health. He settled in San Jose several years ago, and was married at that place a year ago last July. About a week ago, his parents received word that his condition was very serious and his mother left immediately for San Jose. She was at his bedside at the time of his demise. Mr. Kraner intended leaving Saturday for the West, but received word not to come as he would be too late to see his son alive.

Mr. Kraner was a young man of excellent qualities and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. His early death, while expected, will come as a shock to his many friends and schoolmates in this city.

The deceased is survived by his widow, parents and one brother, Wells, now in the United States navy.

The remains of Mrs. Sarah Diebold, who died at Pittsburg, Kansas, arrived here, Monday night, and were taken to the B. F. Millisor home, on south Main street. The funeral services were held at Fairview church, near LaRue, Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The deceased was a former resident of Marion county. She was forty-eight years of age and died following an operation.

The Pope has conferred the title of marchioness on Mrs. Frederic Courtland Penfield, of New York, in recognition of her widespread charities. Mrs. Penfield was Mrs. Anne M. Weightman Walker and one of the wealthiest women in the world when she married Frederic C. Penfield, author and diplomatist, in St. Patrick's cathedral, New York, on February 26, 1908. Her fortune is estimated at $60,000,000, and she has made no secret of the fact that the church will share richly in her estate.

MAP AND SCENES AT NIAGARA FALLS, HELD IN CLUTCH OF GIANT ICE PACK

Two carloads of dynamite were exploded in the Niagara river to dislodge the greatest ice pack that has formed there within the memory of white men. Towns and villages, hotels and millions of dollars' worth of factory property were menaced by the flood caused by the accumulation of ice. The water has risen at Lewiston to within a few feet of the suspension bridge. At Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, near the mouth of the river, the water spread over the lowlands and threatened to sweep the countryside for a radius of a mile. The docks of the Niagara Navigation company have been destroyed. About half a mile of the Michigan Central tracks was covered with water. Further upstream the gorge road which skirts the American shore was obliterated. The great whirlpool rapids, which never before, so far as history records, submitted to the will of the ice, were dry. Sewage from Buffalo, Tonawanda and other places has accumulated to such an extent that it is a grave menace to health.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Marion Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Marion. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Mrs. James Lutz, 122 north Prospect street, Marion, Ohio, says: "I cannot find words to express my gratitude to Doan's Kidney Pills for the benefit they have brought me. For fifteen years I was a sufferer from kidney complaint and other troubles and during the past few years my kidneys became more badly disordered than ever. In April, 1908, I was taken with such a severe attack that I thought I would have to give up entirely. The pain over my right kidney was almost unbearable and I had headaches and dizzy spells. My feet and hands were badly swollen, my appetite was poor and my body became badly bloated. I had no energy or ambition and often a cold sweat would come over me. During this time I took medicines of various kinds, but I steadily grew worse and in three weeks I lost thirty pounds in weight. My flesh was soft and flabby and I became very much alarmed. I finally decided that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble and I had read so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I had a supply procured at Schmidt & Co.'s pharmacy. I did not notice much relief from the first box, but after I had used the second I began to improve and gradually the symptoms of my trouble were relieved. I have gained in weight, feel strong and am able to do my housework with ease. My only regret is that I did not learn of Doan's Kidney Pills years ago, for I know that they would have saved me much misery."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Will Furnish a Courtship Flat To Promote Matrimony.

Chicago, April 26.—A courtship flat, furnished with cozy corners, shaded lamps, a discreet chaperone, and all the other appurtenances necessary to correct love making, will be arranged here soon by Rev. Benjamin F. Aldrich, pastor of the Lincoln Park Congregational church, to promote matches between members of his congregation. Rev. Mr. Aldrich announced that the Lincoln Park Congregational and the Evanston Avenue Congregational churches have purchased property in the vicinity on which a church will be built to house both congregations. On the same lot is a two-story flat building. The upper story will be used as a parsonage and the lower flat will be devoted exclusively to the comforts of the young people of the church.

"It is natural that boys and girls should want to meet each other," said the minister. "It is part of the divine plan to court. Too frequently the matter is considered unworthy of serious attention. Matrimony is not a joke. The choosing of a life helpmate is a matter of study as well as love."

The courting flat will be furnished soon. The rooms will be separated by heavy tapestries and rich, flossy rugs to deaden sound. The minister proposes to instruct all chaperones as to when and where not to peek.

UNITED IN MARRIAGE AT HOME OF BRIDE

Mrs. Millie A. Cochran and Mr. John Cockerl.

PREPARING FOR A GREAT STRIKE

France Must Face Mighty Labor Disturbance.

IT IS BUT A DAY OR TWO IN FUTURE

President Clemenceau Has Intimated That He Will Fight the Demands of the Unionists—Ten Thousand Men and Women, Carrier Pigeons and Wireless Instruments Ready To Go to Work.

Paris, May 5.—The headquarters of the general labor confederation unofficially stated today that a general strike throughout the railroads of France is a question of only a few days if the government continues its suspension of government employes in their participation in the general movement toward unionism.

The declaration of the strike will depend largely upon the answer that Premier Clemenceau makes to the delegation from the labor confederation that will demand of him the restoration of the suspended employes, a guarantee against future suspensions and the retirement of M. Simyan, under secretary of posts.

Will Fight Demand*.

Clemenceau has intimated that he will fight the demands.

The laborites say that they can call out at the start all the postoffice, telegraph, telephone and railway employes in the country, and can expect even the strike until a complete tie-up results.

That the government intends to match its strength against the labor forces alone is indicated by the preparations it is making for the hardest fight in the history of the country. It has established an automobile and carrier pigeon post system, and is arranging to use all the French ships for the despatch of wireless messages

Ten thousand men and women are held in readiness by the government to take the place of the strikers.

Burglars Make a Clean Sweep Out at Laporte

The robbers were traced to a thickly wooded country, seven miles north of this city, where one robber was captured. The stolen property was recovered in full, including the race horse, which Sheriff Anslos drove to this city with his handcuffed prisoner.

JORDAN MAY ESCAPE CHAIR

By Measure New to Criminal Jurisprudence.

HIS LOWER SPINE TO BE PUNCTURED

Resort Will Be Had to the Lumbar Puncture—If the Fluid Which the Needle Extracts Shows Insanity Germs, His Conviction of the Premeditated Murder of His Wife Will Go for Naught.

Boston, May 6.—By a measure absolutely new in criminal history, Chester S. Jordan, convicted of the premeditated murder of his wife, Honora, may escape the chair. The evidence of insanity needed is to be drawn from the spine by what is known as the lumbar puncture. If paresis germs are discernible in his spinal fluid when under a microscope he probably will escape the deadly electrodes. If his spinal fluid is healthy, he will probably die in the chair.

The celebrated neurologists who are to perform this remarkable operation are Dr. Frank W. Page of Boston, and Dr. William H. McIlvane, jr., of Providence.

The lumbar puncture operation consists of the injection of the hypodermic needle into the lower lumbar vertebrae, the two lower so-called "spools," that make up the spinal column. It is in between these that the spinal fluid is to be found in its greatest quantities. This fluid will be extracted by the hypodermic needle. There will be only a few drops and these will be placed under a powerful microscope. If Jordan is suffering from paresis, if he is subject to epilepsy, the germs will be found in this fluid by means of a microscope and will prove them most valuable evidence possible for Jordan, as well as the most remarkable silent witness ever brought into any court-room as evidence.

AWFUL FALL OF A HUNDRED FEET

Pupil of Wilbur Wright Has an Accident,

WHILE MAKING A FLIGHT AT ROME

He Suffers a Serious Attack of Vertigo.

Lieutenant Calderara Remembers Clutching the Levers of the Machine and Then All Is a Blank. Both His Shoulders Are Dislocated and He Receives Internal Injuries—He Will Recover.

Rome, May 6.—Lieutenant Calderara, one of Wilbur Wright's aeroplane pupils, was dangerously injured today when the Wright machine in which he was making a flight, fell from a height of 100 feet. Both of Calderara's shoulders were dislocated, and it is feared that he is internally injured. He was pulled from the wreckage of the machine and carried unconscious to a hospital.

While the machine was at the height of 100 feet, the motor suddenly stopped, and the aeroplane fell with frightful rapidity. Calderara apparently made a desperate effort to right the machine and clutched wildly at the levers, but to no avail.

Calderara was considered by Wright one of the most apt pupils, and was able to sail the machine unaided after only three trial flights with Wright.

In an interview at the hospital, Calderara said he had successfully flown over the parade ground, and was tacking when he was seized with a violent attack of vertigo. He remembers nothing of what followed. He clutched at the levers from instinct, not knowing what he was doing. He says he should not have attempted a flight today as he was feeling ill and only went up to please his uncle, who had come from Verona to see him fly. He thinks that he loosed his grip on the levers when the vertigo overcame him. Calderara is convinced that the accident occurred through no fault of the machine.

The Remarkable Stunt of a Fire-Fighting Dog.

Martins Ferry, O., May 6.—A dog belonging to Captain John Beck of the Vigilant Hose company, which runs following its master to fires, appears to have developed amusing mania for stamping out fires. Wednesday sot fire to its master's residence and then saved the house by putting out the blaze. Mrs. Beck was descending the stairs with a lighted oil lamp to get an early breakfast for her husband, when the dog, seeing the flame, pounced at it, knocking it from her hand and causing it to explode. Instantly the dog pounced upon the burning carpets and succeeded in trampling them out. The family is obliged to keep the dog tied when lamps are burning about the house to prevent it from attacking them.

TWO DEAD AS RESULT OF FEUD

Pistol Battle Near Mayfield, in Blue Grass State.

Mayfield, Ky., May 6.—At the Bynum home in the south part of this county early today Willard Wiley and Joe Bynum were killed by each other. Pistols were used and the tragedy took place inside the house. Wiley died instantly, and Bynum lived an hour. Both were penetrated by several bullets.

Two tragedies were enacted near the Bynum home last year, and Wiley was to have been tried at this term of court on charges of shooting.

PRAYS FOR DIVORCE AFTER THIRTY YEARS

Mrs. Wallace McBride Begins a Proceeding.

FAILS TO PROVIDE FOR HIS CHILDREN

After a married life of thirty years, Laura C. McBride, through Attorney H. Edmund Hill, brought an action for divorce from Wallace McBride, April 23, in the common pleas court. Three children were born to them.

The plaintiff charges that for the past twelve years the defendant has failed to provide for the plaintiff and his children, and during that time he has squandered a small fortune which he inherited.

In the suit of Benjamin F. Adams against Tod Boyd and others, the defendant, through Attorney L. E. Myers, has filed a motion in the common pleas court asking the court to require the plaintiff to make his petition more definite and certain, to set forth the neglect on the part of the defendant in causing a wall to fall. The plaintiff sues to recover $19.15 damages as a result of the toppling of a stone wall.

A proceeding for temporary and permanent allmony was begun by Estelle K. Wilson against Earle R. Wilson, April 23, in the common pleas court, through Attorneys Harry N. Quigley and Mouser & Mouser. The plaintiff sets up that she was married to the defendant, February 21, 1905, and that she was wilfully and heartlessly abandoned, without cause or justification, January 14, 1907. Since the date of his departure she says the defendant has failed to provide for her in any way.

The petition relates that at one time the defendant was the owner of real estate reasonably worth $5,000 in Marion, and that this was sold at the direction of the court to pay debts, amounts but plain-

JAMES BOYLE FOUND GUILTY

Jury Returns Verdict in the Kidnaping Trial.

ENTIRE CASE IS QUICKLY HANDLED

Boyle Lets Case Go to Jury Without Defense.

Story Told by Billy Whitla, the Kidnaped Boy, Is Too Strong To Be Overcome—Boyle Refuses To Plead Guilty and Puts Case Up to Court and Jury—Case of His Companion Called.

Mercer, Pa., May 6.—James H. Boyle was found guilty of kidnaping Billy Whitla, this afternoon, after a trial that occupied only three and a half hours of actual work. The jury was out forty-five minutes.

The penalty is imprisonment from one year to life.

When the court took its noon recess Boyle's attorneys urged him to throw up the game.

Up to the last minute it was believed that Boyle might plead guilty, but Boyle wouldn't listen.

"I won't lie down," Boyle told them. "If I go to the penitentiary, I go fighting."

"Yes."

Sees Billy in Buggy.

Verne Smith, of Sharon, told of seeing Billy Whitla in a buggy with a man the morning Billy was kidnaped. He recognized the man as Boyle, whom he had seen a few days before. He said he had known Boyle when he lived in Sharon twelve years before.

"I wasn't positive of the identification that day because of the black mustache," said Smith. "When Boyle was brought back to Sharon under arrest, I made certain.

Smith was asked on cross-examination why he didn't notify Mr. Whitla. He said it was because he didn't want to mix up in it.

"You know," Smith was asked, "how worried Billy Whitla's parents were and you told them nothing."

"I kept quiet," said Smith.

Identified by Mom.

Abner Hancock, a barber at Silles, Ohio, told of shaving Boyle the day of the kidnaping while Billy sat in a chair and watched him.

Boyle listened coolly enough until John Beatty, a railroad detective, was asked to identify him. Then he jumped up and told his attorneys

A BULLET TRAVELS FROM HEAD TO FOOT

Youngstown, O., May 6.—A thirty-two caliber bullet which was fired into Miss Elizabeth Farringer's head during a Fourth of July celebration fourteen years ago has just now reached her foot, having traversed the entire length of her body without doing harm. Miss Farringer recently had trouble with her instep and seeking surgical help, the doctors discovered the bullet and it will be removed.

A SCORCHING ARRAIGNMENT

Cummins, of Iowa, Denounces the Payne Bill.

FOLLOWS LEAD OF COLLEAGUE

Gives Warning to Members of His Party.

It Is Not the Manufacturers, the Lumber, Coal, Iron, Woolen or Pill Men Who Demand a Change, but Those Who Are Bearing the Burdens Caused by Schedules of Present Measure.

Washington, May 6.—A scorching arraignment of the Aldrich tariff bill was delivered in the senate today by Senator Cummins, of Iowa, whose colleague, Dolliver, also has been roasting the measure.

"This bill of the senate finance committee will not be accepted by those who have favored a revision of the tariff," said Cummins, "as either a fulfillment of the party pledge, or as a settlement of the controversy. If this bill, or anything substantially like it, becomes a law, I predict that a campaign for lower duties will begin the moment the extraordinary session of congress adjourns and will continue with increasing zeal, until the judgment entered in the court of the public conscience is also entered in the journals of congress. It gives me no pleasure to utter this prophesy, for I have earnestly hoped that the revision now in progress would end

STORY OF DAMAGING STORM GROUNDLESS

Little Damage by Sandstorm at Ardmore, Oklahoma.

Fort Worth, Texas, May 6.—Reports of a damaging storm at Ardmore, Oklahoma, are unfounded. A despatch from Ardmore says that a heavy sandstorm swept across the city early today. A high wind prevailed and telegraph and telephone wires are out of commission to the north. Wires south, however, are working. Only slight damage was done.

FUNERAL STOPPED BY UNION AGENT

Because Three Drivers Are Not Members of Union.

Chicago, May 6.—John Butler, business agent of the cab drivers' union, Wednesday stopped the funeral of Mrs. Katherine Smith, because three of the carriage drivers, he alleged, were not members of the union. Butler is declared to have gone to the Smith residence and ordered the driver of the hearse, who was a union man, not to take the casket from the house, until union men had been supplied for all the carriages. When police were called, Butler compromised by letting the funeral proceed to the church, where the non-union drivers were sent back to the barn and union men secured.

THE CREW OF THE BATAVIA IS SAFE

Members Are Rescued by the Steamer Sharpless.

Chicago, May 6.—Instead of drowning when they abandoned their vessel on the lake in last week's storm, the six men of the crew of the steamer, Batavia, are safe in Michigan. The steamer, Sharpless, on its arrival from Gary, Indiana, reported that it had rescued the six men in midlake near Manitou Island. They were landed safely in Michigan after the storm blew over.

PRINCIPLES EXPOUNDED

Theodore Roosevelt on the Japanese Situation.

THE NATION MUST BE JUST AND TRUE

People Must Be Just to Others and True to Themselves.

Nothing Should Be Done That Is Against Healthy Life of the Country, Even at the Risk of a Possible Clash—Respect for Japanese, but No Desire That They Settle Here in Mass.

New York, May 6.—In the current number of the Outlook, out today, Editor Theodore Roosevelt discusses the Japanese situation as it affects the western states. His editorial in part follows:

"There are certain elementary principles all of which should be kept in view if a nation wishes to act justly both by itself and others. It must insist upon what is necessary for its own healthy life, and this even at the cost of a possible clash; but this insistence upon what is due to itself should always be accompanied by all possible courtesy to and fair dealing with others.

"These are the principles upon which the people of the United States should act as regards the question of immigration of the Japanese into this country. The Japanese are a highly civilized people of

FATHER OF TWINS AT SEVENTY-SIX

Knoxville, Tenn., May 6.—Andrew Jackson Miller, seventy-six, confederate veteran, has just been presented by his fourth wife, forty-eight, with twins, both of whom weigh nine pounds each. In order to preserve the identity of the two babies, which look exactly alike, one was dressed in red and one in white. The Millers are receiving the congratulations of the community.

THE JEALOUSY OF JOHN BULL

Behind Plan To Exclude Wright Airship.

BRITISH INVENTORS EXERCISING A PULL

To Keep War Office from Buying Machines.

These Inventors Argue That the British Machines Now in Process of Manufacture Are of Such a Character That It Will Be but a Question of Time Till They Surpass Wright Machine.

London, May 6.—It is stated on the highest semi-official authority that the British government not only has not made, but does not intend to make, any move to purchase the absolute right to the Wright aeroplane patents in Great Britain. And there hangs a peculiar reason. National jealousy is back of the plan to keep the American invented airship out of the country despite the admitted fact that Great Britain is far behind the other nations in its fight to conquer the air.

British inventors with a war office pull have convinced the government that, although the Wright machine is today far ahead of anything else now on the market, yet there are essential crudities in it which have not been overcome which rob it of effectiveness.

These inventors argue that the British machines now in process of

Policy of Good Will.

"The fact that all really patriotic and far-sighted Americans insist that, hand in hand with a policy of good will toward foreign nations, should go the policy of upbuilding of our navy is often interpreted by well meaning but short-sighted men as being a threat towards other nations, or as being provocative of war. Of the two assumptions the first is utterly unwarranted and the second the strict reverse of the truth. We have the right to say, for instance, what immigrants should come to our own shores but we are powerless to enforce this right against any nation that chooses to disregard our wishes, unless we continue to build up and maintain a first-class fighting navy * * * * *.

"We Americans are ourselves proud and high spirited, and we are not always by any means far-sighted. If our honor or our interests were menaced by a foreign power, this nation would fight, wholly without regard to whether or not its own was efficient. In the event of a crisis arising, the peace advocates who object to our building up the navy would be absolutely powerless to prevent this country going to war. A strong navy is the surest guarantee of peace that America can have, and the cheapest insurance against

Awful Total of the Massacre of Christians

BY THE FANATICS IN ADANA PROVINCE

New Sultan Proposes To Run the Ottoman Empire Upon an Economic Plan—Dismisses Useless Palace Officials and Hangers-On. Refugees from the Districts Where Massacres Occur Swamp Missions.

Mersina, April 29.—The Christian village of Bakdjeh has been completely destroyed by the Mohammedan mobs. The inhabitants are almost wholly Armenian and only those who fled in the early stages of the fighting escaped with their lives. The torch was then applied to the town and scarcely a building remains. Messages today from Hadjin say the situation there is desperate and that no relief is in sight. The Christians of the town, including the foreign missionaries, are besieged and have only enough food to last a day or two.

The murders throughout the province of Adana since the trouble started are placed at 35,000. Local troops are aiding the rioters and no relief can be had until an invading army comes from European Turkey. The authorities throughout all of Asiatic Turkey have shown themselves in complete sympathy with the massacre.

Policy of Economy.

Constantinople, April 29.—Sultan Mehmed V inaugurated a sweeping policy of economy today by cutting off scores of attaches from the palace civil list and removing hundreds of supernumeraries from the various government departments.

The Yildiz Kiosk now has a force of attendants about the size of that maintained at the White House in Washington.

All told, several thousands have been let out of their soft jobs and a saving to the government of millions of dollars effected. This sign of a business administration—something new in Turkey—is received with almost universal approval.

There is the highest authority today for the statement that the Young Turks intend eventually to court-martial Abdul Hamid, the deposed sultan. If this is done, his execution is probable, as the Young Turks would hardly care to take this action unless they had sufficient evidence to insure Abdul's conviction on some penal offense.

Swarming to Mission.

London, April 29.—A despatch today from Antioch in the Aleppo province of Asiatic Turkey, says that a countless multitude of widows and orphans, victims of the massacres throughout Asia Minor, are swarming toward the mission. Many of them are horribly wounded and are begging for food and shelter. Their condition could not be more pitiable.

The missionaries are doing their best to relieve the situation, but are greatly swamped by the heavy influx. Thousands in Asia Minor who escaped the massacres are doomed to die of starvation and sickness unless prompt aid is rendered. There is little prospect of relief arriving in time.

The refugees are from scores of different towns and they say that hardly a Christian family has escaped without the loss of one or more members, while in hundreds of cases, whole families have been butchered.

Massacres are still sweeping to the east and north, the authorities aiding the Mohammedans in their atrocities.

A TRAIN DITCHED AND SCORE HURT

Springfield, Mass., April 29.—Train No. 46 on the Boston and Albany railroad, which left Springfield for Boston at 7:50 this morning, was ditched at about half a mile west of Palmer Station shortly after 8 o'clock. No one was killed, twenty were injured, many of them seriously. Seven cars were thrown from the rails. A broken rail was the cause of the accident. The passengers were badly shaken up.

HE IS TOUCHED FOR VALUABLES

New York, April 29.—A man who says he is John G. Hayes, forty-four, superintendent of the People's Coal company, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, and resides at No. 141 east Eighteenth street, that city, is at Bellevue hospital today suffering from an assault. He told the hospital attendants that he had been "blackjacked" and robbed of a diamond ring, watch and chain and $50 in cash. The ring and watch were valued at $800, he says. When Hayes was first discovered in an areaway it was believed he was fatally injured. The physicians said today, however, that he would recover.

THIRTY JUNIORS ARE SUSPENDED

For Nailing Colors to Flagstaff at Bedford.

Bedford, Ind., April 29.—With thirty of the boy members of the junior class suspended for having nailed their class colors to the top of the High school flagstaff, the girl members of the class have come to school wearing long streamers of the class colors and announcing their intention of going on strike unless the boys are reinstated. After the juniors had nailed their flag at the top of the pole, they smeared the latter with tar so that their emblem could not be reached by the rival class.

GREAT STORM SWEEPS LAND

Extends from Nebraska East to Pennsylvania.

IS MOST SEVERE IN MIDDLE WEST

High Winds, Heavy Rains, Hail and Some Snow.

In Many Localities There Are Also Electrical Displays — Man Dies from Fright in Kansas—Several Injured—Damage Done by Hail Stones Eight Inches in Circumference—Train Is Snowbound.

Chicago, April 29.—High winds, heavy rains, hail, snow and electrical disturbances prevailed early today over a territory as far west as Nebraska and east into Pennsylvania. The Middle West suffered the most severely.

Douglas, Kansas, was hit by a tornado that killed one person and injured several more, killed stock and blew down four school-houses. At Tupela, Oklahoma, a tornado wrecked a number of buildings last night and devastated orchards.

Wisconsin and Michigan report heavy snows. A train was stalled in a drift near Oshkosh, Wisconsin. Snow and hail fell early today in Iowa and western Pennsylvania. Cleveland reports a hail storm at 5:30 that played havoc among the fruit trees.

The storm traveled rapidly eastward. For three hours this morning it treated Chicago to rain, hail and snow and a brilliant display of lightning. Several buildings, including the Illinois Central elevator, were struck.

No Deaths Outside Kansas.

No deaths have been reported thus far outside the path of the Kansas tornado.

Reports from Omaha say a thirty-minute hail storm early today did considerable damage. Some of the stones measured six to eight inches in circumference.

Students at Bellevue college, south of Omaha, took refuge in cellars when they saw the big black cloud coming. Several buildings were blown down at Brule, Nebraska.

The tornado passed through the southern part of Butler county, Kansas, demolishing many farm houses and destroying ten residences in the southeast part of Douglas. Louis Ayers, seventy, was so frightened that he died from heart disease a few minutes after the storm had passed. Mrs. J. J. Jones was severely injured. Two farmers are reported seriously hurt.

LITTLE SPRING DOES BUSINESS

Beats the Government Out of Sugar Duties.

AMOUNT SAID TO RUN OVER MILLION

In Any Event Sugar Company Pays Million.

The Outlook Magazine Explains How the Manipulation of a Small Spring Enables a Subsidiary of the Sugar Trust To Shortweight the Government to the Extent of 75,000,000 Pounds.

New York, April 29.—"The American Sugar Refining company of New York—a subsidiary company of the American Sugar Refining company of New Jersey—has been for at least the greater part of the last decade engaged in smuggling sugar by the daily use of a fraudulent device," declares the Outlook today, "and from 1901 to 1907 seventy-five million pounds of sugar were smuggled, on which the unpaid duties amounted to a million and a quarter of dollars. The government is also claiming that it was defrauded of duties on shipments of sugar reaching back as far as 1897 at two Brooklyn refineries and also at Jersey City and will try to collect duties thereon.

Following what is characterized as a "painstaking and careful investigation" of the recent recovery by the government from the sugar company of more than a million dollars unpaid duties, turned over to the collector "under protest," the magazine today presents the result as the "case of the seventeen holes" and shows in detail how the alleged short weighing of the government was accomplished and its official weighers duped by a small spring, a wire and a hole bored through the corner of each of the seventeen official scales placed on the big sugar docks in Brooklyn.

Operation Is Explained.

After describing the manner in which the sugar is unloaded from the vessels and passed to the weighing-house it is explained that the government checker sits at the beam end of the scale and the yard employe at the other. The author, Harold J. Howland, then takes up the narrative of his experiences there.

"Taking the seat in the corner reserved for the company employe just by my left knee was a thick post supporting one end of the shelf beneath the scale bar. Under the shelf was a system of levers and joints which formed the connection between the registering beam and the rod leading to the platform outside. Between the post and the end wall of the scale house was a space perhaps a foot wide, as dark as a pocket. Running my hand down the post, I touched a thin strip of iron, its outer end bent into a ring. The strip worked loosely in a hole in the post, and, as I pushed it through, its inner end ran over a joint of the scale mechanism. The spring of the steel exerted force on the levers and made the registering beam drop. We found that a pressure of only one ounce at that point was good for a loss of forty-eight ounces on the platform of the scale.

Spring in Each.

"Regularly spaced around the dock stand are the seventeen scale houses and in each of these I found in the dark the post pierced with the hole. Some were worn more, some less; for not all of the scales have the same amount of use. In several instances the hole had worn so large that it had been filled in, in one case with putty, in another with tacks, still a third had a sliver of wood glued to it to make the hole smaller, all showing how long the doctored scales had been in use.

"In the summer of 1907 a man, named Richard Whalley, told in the treasury department in Washington that he had worked for the sugar company for years as a checker, and after the Dingley tariff bill went into effect he had, under the direction of the company's dock superintendent, used methods for lessening the apparent weight of sugar. Whalley was made a special employe and was sent to Brooklyn with a customs special agent, Richard Parr. Whalley obtained employment as a tally man and on November 19, 1907, he reported to Parr that, while he could not prove anything, he had discovered that whenever a draft of sugar was put upon the scales the company checker dropped his left hand in a peculiar way. Parr and an assistant watched and saw the same thing.

It Weighs More.

"They then stopped a draft as it was being taken from the scales, ran it into another scale house and weighed it themselves. It weighed fourteen pounds more than it had a moment before and another draft weighed eighteen.

"Parr ordered the company checker, Kehoe, to get up and sat down in his place. He found the spring with its curled handle wound with string as if to protect the fingers of anyone handling it. He did not take the spring out of the hole, but asked the checker what he knew about it. That individual professed the most complete ignorance of its existence, origin, purpose or history and showed no curiosity about it. In fact he even declined to look at the spring that was found or the hole. It was some little time afterward that the government officials got to the other scale houses that had been in use that day, but when they did they found the checkers had been relieved and, while the holes were there, no springs were to be found."

Ship bills of lading which were evidence in the government suit and statistics of various kinds are then cited at very great length to explain that only the government was defrauded by the false system of weighing. It is alleged that two sets of books, one showing what the government was paid duty on and the other what the consignee received, were kept and they were pasted back to back for purposes of reference. It is then stated that the company claims none of its responsible officials knew of fraudulent weighing and the article concludes:

THEY PLAN TO DO BEVERIDGE

ARE VERY ACTIVE IN HIS BEHALF

Hope To Wrest State from the Senator.

The Result of the Election Last Fall Leaves Beveridge the Sole Dispenser of Public Jobs in Indiana. Hemenway and Watson Are the Main Cogs in the Fairbanks Machine—Both Have Grievances.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 29.—Friends of United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge have just learned of what they say is a well-laid plan to defeat Beveridge for reelection and in his stead return former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks to the senate.

The Beveridge and Fairbanks clans have been at swords' points for years and the Fairbanks forces feel that Beveridge is responsible for the election of a Democratic senator over Senator Hemenway and the defeat of ex-Congressman James E. Watson for the governorship. Hemenway and Watson are the main cogs in the Fairbanks machine.

Beveridge's friends discern a plan by Hemenway and Watson to get even. Watson has said he will take up the practice of law in South Bend, and, it is assumed, he will try to gather the remnants of the Fairbanks machine in the northern part of the state. Hemenway lives at Boonville, near Evansville, and his friends are almost exclusively in that district.

Meanwhile, with the work of reorganization in his behalf going on, Fairbanks is making a tour of the world which will delay his return to Indiana until after Beveridge's fate is settled.

ROBBED OF HAIR TWICE IN YEAR

St. Louis, Mo., April 29.—For the second time within a year pretty Elizabeth Zabb, fourteen, has been robbed of her long golden hair. Early Wednesday morning a negress crept into her bedroom and while she was still asleep, cut off a braid eighteen inches long and made her escape. The other theft of her locks took place last October.

SHOOTS MAID; THEN HIMSELF

Had Been Lovers Until Last Christmas.

At That Time Miss Helen A. Marden, of Somerville, Massachusetts, Breaks Her Engagement with Porter Smith, of Chicago—He Broods Over the Matter—Calls Upon Her This Morning.

Northampton, Mass., April 29.—Helen A. Marden, of Somerville, Massachusetts, a member of the senior class of Smith college, was shot on the college campus this morning, by Porter Smith, of Chicago, a graduate of Dartmouth last year, who then shot himself and died instantly. Miss Marden died at the noon hour.

The bodies lay within four feet of each other when found.

Smith and Miss Marden became engaged last year, but at Christmas time, the engagement was broken off by the young woman, whose action appears to have been a severe blow to Smith, who made several attempts to renew the engagement and came again to this city two or three days ago for this purpose.

Calls on Victim.

This morning he called on her as she was starting from her home for chapel, and proposed that they again talk the matter over. The two walked about the lower campus, comparatively deserted at the time, engaged in earnest conversation. Smith is supposed to have made one final, desperate plea, and being repulsed drew a revolver and fired three shots into his companion and then turned the weapon on himself with fatal effect. He shot Miss Marden first in the temple and twice in the back. The college gardener, Canning, heard the first shot. He saw the couple standing close together and heard the girl scream after each of the first two shots, but at the third shot she fell and did not scream. Smith at once put the revolver to his temple and fired one shot, which caused almost instant death.

Sisters Live Together.

The girl had a sister, Louise Marden, in the junior class, and Smith also had a sister, Emily Smith, in the junior class and the sisters lived in the same house on the campus.

Smith had been in town two days, registering at the Draper hotel Tuesday night. He appeared cheerful. This morning he sat in the office, reading the papers, and chatted with the hotel employes, impressing them as one thoroughly in his right mind and in such a manner that it could hardly be believed he then had the deed planned, which must have been the case. He left the hotel about 8 o'clock evidently going to the college at once. Nobody was more surprised than the hotel employes who knew him when they learned of the tragedy.

The cause of the explosion is believed to have been grit becoming mixed with the explosive in the grinding mill.

The battle was fought between members of the Ware and Brewster families, both of which are prominent. Trouble occurred between them two years ago.

Too Much Water.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 29.—Barney Keenan, arrested on a charge of intoxication, is dead in jail as a result of drinking too much water. Following his arrest, Wednesday, Keenan demanded that the police officials give him some whisky. This being refused, he drank four gallons of water and died of the effects.

COSTLY BLAZE IN WINDY CITY

One Man Dead and Two Others Are Missing.

MONETARY LOSS IS CLOSE TO MILLION

Burning of "B" Elevator of the Illinois Central Railroad Is Spectacular in the Extreme — Firemen Fight Flames While a Terrific Electrical Storm Is Raging About Them—Many Explosions.

Chicago, April 29.—One fireman is dead, two persons are missing and six persons were seriously injured as the result of a fire today which destroyed elevator "B" of the Illinois Central railroad. The elevator is a total wreck and the loss is estimated at between $800,000 and $1,000,000.

The fire was spectacular in the extreme and the firemen fought it while a terrific electrical storm was raging around them.

The dead man is Lieutenant William McElligot.

Supposedly from Lightning.

The fire began in the midst of an electrical storm and is supposed to have been started by a bolt of lightning. A fireboat was hastily despatched to the scene and later all the downtown engines responded.

Lieutenant McElligot headed a crew of firemen who started into the burning building with a line of hose. As soon as they stepped inside there was a terrific explosion of grain dust. McElligot was instantly killed and Simon Cooper disappeared. The others were all injured and were rescued by their comrades outside.

The explosion partly wrecked the elevator and the flames spread with astonishing rapidity. Inside of an hour the whole structure was a mass of flames. It was still burning at 4 a. m., though the firemen had succeeded in checking its spread to other elevators nearby. During the progress of the fire, there were a dozen more dust explosions, but no other injuries resulted.

Washington, April 29.—Today's treasury statement: Receipts $2,125,991; disbursements $2,250,000.

TYPEWRITER OF CORRESPONDENT

In Driving Sixteen Battleships Off the Seas.

Holds That the Remodeling of the Sixteen Battleships, Which Make the World Trip, on Lines Which Experience Has Demonstrated Best Is an Admission That They Are Practically Worthless.

The navy department today announced that the sixteen battleships which made the trip around the world are to be remodeled, thus practically confirming the reports that have been current since the return of the fleet that the voyage practically wrecked the navy.

Since the return of the fleet it has been reported at various times that masts had been sprung, that plates were loosened, that the intricate electrical machinery, including the fire control, was hopelessly out of order and that other things had happened. Nevertheless, the navy department insists that the ships stood the voyage better than expected, which leaves to the imagination what the original expectation or fear had been.

Will Be Remodeled.

That sixteen battleships have been laid up for repairs and that sixteen battleships are to be remodeled are facts admitted by the navy department, and those facts seem to bear out the reports that the United States navy today is practically useless and out of commission.

If the plans of the navy department are carried out, it is proposed to go back to first principals. In other words, it is proposed to make of the sixteen battleships a type something like the old Monitor, save that the new type will have more free board. All the cumbersome superstructure which at present adorns the battleships and which affords a splendid mark to the enemy's guns, will be taken off.

All that will appear above decks will be a turret fore and aft and the funnels for the boilers and a wire "waste basket" type of mast, which will be used for the lookouts.

Same Old Criticism.

It is asserted by those who criticise the navy department that this remodeling is an admission that the armor belt on the battleships was misplaced. The innovation raises the armor belt to a point where it will become more effective, because taking off the superstructure will, it is calculated, raise the ships one foot higher in the water and consequently the armor belt will be in a desired position. The ships could not have been raised otherwise without danger of turning turtle or becoming unseaworthy.

The fighting masts are to be dispensed with. They have not only proved useless, but cumbersome and easily put out of commission. On the other hand, it has been proved that the wire basket type of mast is practically invulnerable and may be punctured many times without danger of collapse.

The Contradiction.

Washington, April 29.—In reply to criticisms of the battleships which are now undergoing alterations at the navy yards, Secretary Meyer reiterated today the statement that the fleet would be united again in June, in as good war condition as ever.

By that time the alterations decided upon some time ago, as a result of the fleet's trip around the world, will have been completed. Each battleship will have the two-fire control masts of the waste-basket type, will be painted in war color, and will have the brass figure-heads removed.

The afterbridges will also have been taken off and part of the forward bridges, reducing the top hamper considerably. This reduction, however, will make less than an inch difference in the water line of the vessels.

The ships in their new dress, will be fully tested during the extensive maneuvers that are to be held this summer, to demonstrate the effectiveness of these changes.

SENATOR SCOTT A STAND-PATTER

So He Declares in the Senate This Afternoon

HE IS OPPOSED TO TARIFF CHANGES

On Coal, Lumber, Iron, Hides, Wool and Pottery

Not Only Takes This Stand in the Interests of West Virginia but Also of the Entire South—Lower Tariffs He Says, Means Lower Wages, and the Republican Party Can Not Afford the Latter

Washington April 27 —In a vigorous speech Senator Scott of West Virginia announced to the senate his opposition to any changes in existing tariff rates on coal lumber iron and steel hides wool oil and pottery In these things his state is greatly interested and he declared he would stand for no reduction in any of these schedules and would work and vote against it

In declaring that he was a 'stand patter' Scott said that he had the official support of the legislature of West Virginia It was not only for the interests of West Virginia however that he demanded the retention of the present rates but for the South and the union as a whole

'The Southland' Scott said sees ahead of her nothing but prosperity under a protective tariff At no distant day you will find the people of the South sending to congress members who will be the strongest protectionists this country has ever produced'

Charity at Home

"Removing the duty on coal Scott declared would render a half dozen of our western states dependent on a foreign country for a necessity of life would close down coal mines in many states would depopulate many towns dependent upon this industry would ruin numbers of American coal operators I believe in charity which begins at home

Protesting against the proposition to cut the duty on lumber in half or put it on the free list Senator Scott said that there would then be nothing left for the lumber men but cut wages

Are we ready to say to the lumbermen all over the country The Republican party stands for a cut in their wages of fifty to sixty per cent' Scott asked He said that an association of manufacturers outside the United State Steel corporation with whose members he was well acquainted and whose word was as good as their bond had declared that even a slight reduction in the Dingley rates on iron and steel would enable the foreign manufacturers to use American markets as a dumping ground for their products with the inevitable result of lower wages here

For Free Hides

Speaking for free hides the senator said that the cattle raisers in West Virginia had informed him that this would mean a loss to them of from two to four dollars on every beef they sent to market and one had told him that it would cost him $1,200 on his next shipment

In urging a duty on petroleum the senator said

'The people of West Virginia demand a duty on oil They do not hold that the Standard Oil company is a great monster devouring alike the living and the dead They see the development this corporation has brought to the state and they desire that it shall be fairly treated Today there are 13 000 oil wells in West Virginia being operated and producing 25 000 barrels of oil per day at a value of $1 78 a barrel Today under the assessment laws of my state seventy six million dollars worth of oil land is paying taxes nine thousands men are directly employed in this business and they are among the liveliest the most wide awake and progressive citizens we have in the state of West Virginia

Expert Opinion

Is not their testimony worth that of those who would scarcely know an oil well if they saw one They know that the Standard Oil company buys their oil They the transaction begins and there it ends They know that the Standard is in the market to buy the best grades of oil at the cheapest figures wherever it can They know that it makes but little if any difference to the Standard Oil company whether there is a duty on oil or not And these independent oil operators know that the placing of crude oil on the free list means death and destruction to their business

'It may be the senator said 'that the Standard Oil company should be punished If it has done anything wrong If it has broken the laws punish it but do not ruin the independent oil operator of West Virginia and of the United States in an attempt to reach the Standard Oil company I do not propose to let an populistic howlings influence me in what I conceive to be my duty in regard to taking care of the independent oil producers of my state

50,000 WOMEN OF METROPOLIS

STARTLING CLAIM OF ROSE STOKES

Socialism Is the Remedy Offered by the Wife of the Millionaire Socialist—Claims Women Can Not Earn Enough in the Factories, Shops and Business Places To Feed and Clothe Themselves.

Boston, April 26.—"There are fifty thousand New York women on the streets who are selling their souls for bread," is a statement made here by Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, which today is giving Boston clergymen food for though, "and these are not wicked women," she continued, in her defense of Socialism before an East Boston's men club, to which she spoke last night. "These women," she continued, "cannot earn enough in the factories, shops and business places to get enough money to properly feed and clothe themselves and the result is inevitable.

"There must be a new state rise out of the rottenness which exists today, and Socialism will wipe out the evil conditions. There are people who say Socialism means free love. That is false and cannot be proven. That there are divorces among Socialists is true, but that seems to be common in all sources. You would certainly destroy all parties if you weeded out the men who divorced their first wives."

Religious Ceremony Wednesday.

Today's action is almost wholly political in its significance. At sunrise tomorrow, unless unforeseen circumstances intervene, the formal and religious ceremony will take place according to the old Turkish custom. At this ceremony the proclamation, officially announced by parliament, today, will be read and the new reign will date from tomorrow.

Among those of the sultan's household who were arrested during the night was Prince Saba-Ed-Din, the sultan's nephew. He is charged with active participation in the recent reactionary attempt and will undoubtedly be severely dealt with. All the women of Abdul's harem were scattered to the old palace seraglio and to various places in the country.

The soldiers at Erzerum, in the northeastern part of Asia Minor, have arrested fifty of their officers and sent them to Trebizond, on the Black sea. The despatches mentioning the arrest do not make it clear whether the officers are guilty of being reactionaries, or whether the soldiers themselves are reactionaries and have mutinied against the Young Turks. It is feard that the latter is true, in which event a punitive expedition will be despatched to the scene at once.

Thirty-Three Years.

Abdul Hamid's deposition today ends a reign of nearly thirty-three years, he having ascended the throne on August 31, 1876. He succeeded his elder brother, Murad V., whose deposition was based on the grounds of insanity. Murad died August 29, 1904.

Murad's deposition was the work of conspirators, in which Abdul played a leading part. He was accused of the greatest cruelties and atrocities, though no relief was furnished in the long reign that has just come to an end.

No more cunning and despotic ruler ever sat on the Turkish throne than Abdul, and under his reign the empire has been held back, the populace downtrodden and a score of memorable crimes and massacres committed that will always make his reign known as one of the darkest in the country's history.

As a grafter, Abdul is said to have been the most accomplished in Europe. He levied toll everywhere, and those of his official family who would not work with him in his nefarious schemes, soon found themselves out of power, and they still continued to cross the sultan, their lives were forfeited under one pretext or another.

A chapter of palace murders is laid to Abdul's reign that makes the crime careers of other rulers appear as innocent diversions.

Abdul's health is poor. If he escapes the assassins, he will probably be permitted to live in peace on a government annuity.

Reported a Prisoner.

London, April 27.—The Exchange Telegraph's Constantinople correspondent says that Abdul Hamid is now a prisoner in the palace of Cheraghan, on the Bosphorus. It says that during the night a body of Young Turks entered the Yildiz Kiosk, arrested all the remaining members of the household and took Abdul a prisoner.

The Exchange's report has not been confirmed by any of the other news agencies with representatives in Constantinople.

Account of Massacres.

London, April 27.—A despatch today from Adana gives a graphic account of the first five days of the rioting and massacres in that city, detailed by the Rev. Herbert Adams Gibbons, a missionary from Hartford, Connecticut.

"Early last Wednesday, April 14, while I was at the market," Mr. Gibbons said, "I noticed that the Armenians were closing their shops and hurrying to their homes. An Armenian and a Turk had been killed during the night, and the corpses were paraded through the streets. The people became greatly inflamed at the sight of these corpses and crowds began to assemble, armed with revolvers, clubs, knives and axes.

"By 11 o'clock the rioting was getting under full swing. The military commander of Adana was with me in the market. Had he had the requisite courage he might have suppressed the trouble in its incipiency, but he was either a coward or in sympathy with the uprising and permitted it to go on unchecked. He kept in hiding for two days.

"William Chambers, field secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and I went to the telegraph office to summon the British consul, encountering the bodies of the slain at every step. Two Armenians were killed in the telegraph office before our eyes. We made representations to the Vali, but he said he could do nothing. He evidently was afraid of his life.

"In the afternoon the situation grew decidedly worse. The Armenians retreated to their homes, which they turned into fortresses. For two days they were able to beat off the attackers, but the fanatics finally won the upper hand and Adana became a hell. The bazaars were looted, and set on fire. There was incessant shooting and burning in every section of the town. Moslems from the neighboring towns poured in to whet their appetites on the scenes of carnage.

Gives Arms to Rioters.

"The Vali actually distributed arms to the rioters, alleging that they were Turkish reserves and were to be used in suppressing the uprising.

Major Daughty-Wylie, the British vice consul at Mersine, commanded the Vali to supply him with a body of troops and went to the railroad end of the town and succeeded in preventing the villagers from coming into Adana. It was while in this work that he was shot and seriously wounded.

"Thursday, Daniel Miner Rogers and Henry Maurer, American missionaries, were killed under treacherous circumstances. Friday the Armenians gave up the fight. The town is in a pitiable condition. Corpses lie scattered everywhere, and it is impossible to estimate the number of dead. Graves are being dug in the Turkish cemeteries. They are little more than trenches into which the hundreds of victims are thrown."

New York, April 26.—Shamed by his arrest and imprisonment, Raymond Dominguez, fifty-five a wealthy importer of tobacco, is dead today, a victim of heart disease. THE LIFE EXTENDED.

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday-School Lesson for May 2 is "Paul's First Missionary Journey—Cyprus." Acts 13:1-12.

One explanation given for the present amazing interest of laymen in the missionary cause is that they are not content with a small life, circumscribed by the bounds of their own secular business. The spirit of the times impels them to seek a cosmopolitan influence. There has been preached the doctrine of the strenuous life and the doctrine of the simple life. Now, more popular than either, we hear the doctrine of the extended life.

This twentieth century mood chords with the spirit of the early Christian church. Restless and outreaching, the first disciples sought to bear their message as widely as they could. They early caught a vision of a church life which was one, whether expressed at home or abroad. They who abode by the stuff should share in the honor and reward equally with those who went forth to fight. The missionary enterprise was the church's enterprise, and not the peculiar undertaking of the missionary himself. This appears plainly in the story recorded in the Book of Acts, and it depicts the normal condition for a church.

Won and Winning.

The first formal and organized missionary expenditure of the Christian church is related in this lesson. Significantly, the story begins with a statement of the condition of the church at Antioch, which had become a center of Christian activity, though it in itself was the result of missionary endeavor. It may yet again happen, as it happened in those early days and often since, that the new centers created by aggressive extension work became in turn the main headquarters of Christian power and influence. Antioch had a strong church, with prophets and teachers. It was a representative company of believers, numbering both the high and the humble. On its roll were such distinguished names as Saul and Barnabas and Simeon and Lucius, and the foster-brother of Herod the Tetrarch. The last named indicates how one man may follow folly and his brother seek wisdom.

The Antioch church was, at home, strong in the missionary spirit. This is the big concern of present-day Christendom. Once Christians prayed for open doors in the pagan world. Now there are more open doors than the church is willing to enter. The one great problem of Christian extension today is the problem of the home church; her interest in the broader work, her devotion and her spirit of sacrifice. One may read many signs that the providential awakening of the non-Christian world, and the wide-flung doors of opportunity, are being followed by a widespread moving upon the hearts of Christian people by the Spirit of God, so that the consciousness of Christendom is being aroused to the meaning of these new times.

A few days ago there met in Toronto the first National Missionary congress ever assembled anywhere. Forty-two hundred strong men, representing every part of the dominion and every walk in life, came together to consider what is Canada's duty as a nation toward the evangelization of the whole world. A similar congress is projected for the United States, to be held in St. Louis next March. Such facts as these deserve to be written in the same category with the annals of the missionary movement that began at the Antioch church.

Some Stnt Men.

No more important task ever engages a church's thought than the selection of her missionaries. It used to be a somewhat casual matter. Whoever was moved to offer himself was accepted for foreign service. Today the great denominations are more particular in the choice of their foreign ambassadors than are the great nations. The churches can better afford to place in their biggest metropolitan pulpits second-rate men than they can afford to send such men to the non-christian world. The Antioch church had a wholesome sense of the gravity of its undertaking when it obeyed the call to set apart Barnabas and Saul for foreign service.

Out of the heart of this strong and strategic church were plucked its two leading members, that they might go forth on a mission. It was a call of God. Then, as now, the call came to the picked men. Only such are qualified for missionary service. This is no mere career where men may find a life work and an interesting occupation. It is a mission, reserved only for those who have felt the constraining impulse of the Divine Spirit.

That Saul should become a missionary was written in his very character. He had the imperial vision and the pioneer heart. He himself expressed his deep purpose when he said: "Being ambitious to preach the gospel not where Christ was already named, lest I should build on another man's foundation." Most of us know noble spirits today possessed by the same ambition.

A Diversified Force.

It takes many forms of ability to do complete missionary work. This first company consisted of Saul and Barnabas and John Mark, the last filling the role of reporter and general assistant. The present-day missionary propaganda has not yet got to the point of sending out a journalistic historian of contemporary missionary effort for the sake of the church at home. Thus early began the missionary practice of a diversity of effort. Even as an army has many forms or service—infantry, cavalry, artillery, signal corps, engineering corps—so the modern missionary advance has many lines of approach. There is the preaching missionary, the teaching missionary, the healing missionary, the mechanic missionary, and the author missionary, all seeking the same end by various routes. This is wisdom. Even when a frontal attack would fail, victory may be accomplished by a flank movement. There is such a thing as missions by indirection. This is a branch of missionary science as yet largely undeveloped.

After High and Low.

A round-the-world journey is a mere episode in these days of travel facilities, being very much less hazardous than the expedition which this first missionary force undertook, although the latter occupies very small space on our big maps. Later on we shall see what was involved in Paul's many travels in the way of personal hardship and danger. From Antioch the missionaries went down to the coast, embarking at Seleucia for Cyprus, Salamis being their point of landing. Thence they journeyed overland some one hundred and fifty miles to Paphos, where the particular incident of the lesson occurred.

The Roman proconsul, Sergius Paulus, desired to hear Saul and Barnabas. The latter were quick to perceive the advantage of reaching the official and influential classes, even as modern missionaries have been. Canada has lately seen the tremendous power of having as a Christian leader a missionary advocate, Sir Andrew Frazer, for thirty-seven years an eminent servant of the crown in India, latterly lieutenant governor of Bengal. We cannot for an instant conceive of Saul's overlooking the common people. To them he was bound to go, following the fashion of his Master. Yet he was no demagogue, and as a man of the world he realized that the gospel belongs in the palace as well as in the peasant's hut.

A Fighting Missionary.

The proconsul was too big to be allowed to fall into the hands of this new religion without the most desperate efforts on the part of the forces of error. Whoever undertakes to bring in the day of truth and righteousness must expect to see considerable hard fighting. Indeed, every reformer and pioneer and apostle of the truth needs to be a first-class fighting man. Saul filled this bill. When Elymas the Sorcerer tried to dissuade the proconsul from the way, Saul turned upon him in the awfulness of righteous anger. It is not advised by scriptures than men be not angry. Certain forms of anger are even commended. In this instance it is to be noted that the record runs that Saul, "filled with the Holy Ghost, fastened his eyes on" the sorcerer, and proceeded to arraign him in speech that would be deemed highly improper in many a placid, conventional pulpit. "O full of all guile and all villainy, thou son of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord? Now behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell upon him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand." That incident compelled attention and astonishment, and turned many to faith.

Innocuous, spineless, sugar-coated saints have no place in missionary endeavor. Such men as Dr. Dubose, of Soochow, who for more than forty years, in season and out of season, has led the fight against opium. When one by one all shrank from this seemingly impossible task, he held to it with the doggedness of a southern warrior; and now, lo, he has lived to see the day of triumph. I was reminded of Saul's burning words to Elymas when an incident was related to me as I once set off for the interior of China without interpreter or military escort. The parting counsel of my missionary friend was, "Remember that the Chinese cannot swim, and also that if you either thrash or make ridiculous the leader of a mob, the temper of the latter will at once change."

The story told in illustration concerned another friend of mine, a man of the mildest manners ordinarily. He was conducting services in a Chinese street chapel, and a native preacher was speaking, when a gang of ruffians attempted to break up the meeting. They were headed by a huge fellow of considerable daring, and they made straight for the speaker. The missionary, bidding the native pastor to continue his preaching no matter what happened, suddenly darted down from the platform as the rowdy neared it, seized the latter by the scruff of the neck, ran him down the aisle through his amazed companions, and literally kicked him out the door. In Chinese fashion, the mob was so amused at the sudden turn of events that they allowed the meetings to proceed without molestation thereafter. Saul's course in the case of the sorcerer reinforces the wise man's counsel: "Boldness, yet more boldness, and ever boldness."

HINKLIN'S STORY OF THE JACKSON KILLING

First Shot Fired by a Hunter in the Vicinity—Last Two Shots Fired by Curry in Quick Succession—Jury in Curry Murder Trial Is Excused Until Monday.

Upper Sandusky, April 21.—[Special.]—That the jurors, the majority of whom are farmers, should be excused and given Saturday in which to attend their duties, was the sentiment expressed by Judge Daniel Babst, of Crestline, when he adjourned the Hamilton R. Curry murder trial here, Friday afternoon. By agreement of counsel court was adjourned until 8:30 o'clock Monday morning.

Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice, who left here, Friday evening, and went to Columbus, states that the state's evidence will be completed by Tuesday. He thinks that the case will go to the jury by Thursday night.

Friday afternoon's session was largely-attended. Attorney John Egan took up the cross-examination of David Cusic, who proved an exceptionally strong witness for the state.

John H. Hinklin, another employe of the Erie Railroad company, was then called by the state. He said he was at the "hump" at the time the defendant went over to make the arrest, and that he later heard a shot, then two more shots.

It is the purpose of the state to show that the first shot fired was that of some hunter in the vicinity about the time of Jackson's killing.

Hinklin said the interval between the first shot and the other two shots was but a minute. The second shots were fired in rapid succession

On cross examination, witness admitted not having mentioned the occurrence of the first shot before the coroner at Marion, and acknowledged that he had talked over the testimony with Attorney Parker and other attorneys for the defense one evening this week in Mr. Parker's office. He would not attempt to name any one to whom he had talked regarding the first shot previous to the meeting in Mr. Parker's office. He declared that the first shot and last two shots were not made by the same gun.

Floyd L. Bensley, a clerk in the transfer office in Marion, was then called and examined by Mr. Parker. His testimony was unimportant.

John Ward, of Huntington, Indiana, a brakeman employed by the Erie, stated that he was beside his caboose in the Erie yards the day Jackson was killed. He saw the defendant step quickly to the body of Jackson after the shots, but was unable to say whether Mrs. Jackson or Curry arrived at the body first

The witness stated that Curry picked up something and went toward the "hump" on a run. On cross-examination, Ward was confronted with an alleged statement, made by him to the coroner, to the effect that he had seen Jackson face Detective Curry with a corn knife or what was supposed to be a corn knife, raised. He admitted having sworn to that statement.

"No, he did not have his hand like that," insisted Ward. "I tell you he had his hand like this." And Ward faced the jury showing his hand and arm barely uplifted.

Ward was the last witness for the day.

The Trial Resumed.

Upper Sandusky, O., April 26.—[Special.]—When the Hamilton R Curry trial was resumed, at 8:30 o'clock this morning, after an adjournment lasting two days, the jurors appeared fresh and attentive The attendance was small.

The state expects to rest its case by this evening, and the defense will begin the introduction of its evidence, Tuesday morning, in the event that the prosecution winds up its testimony, today.

New witnesses are here from Toledo and Columbus. The Toledo witnesses are subpoenaed by the defense, and are presumed to be character witnesses.

Reuben Greenland, an Erie switchman, was the first witness, today He related the same story that he told to the coroner, and it contained nothing of importance either way.

Attorney John Egan, counsel for the state, referred to Curry as Officer Curry. Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice objected to the term before the jury, and Judge Daniel Babst, addressing the jurors said that they should not regard the defendant in the light of being an officer of the law.

On cross-examination, Witness Greenland was forced to admit that he had been arrested several times, and that he had talked with attorneys for the prosecution with reference to the killing of Jackson by Curry.

The only other witnesses this morning, were William S. Lowmiller, Erie conductor, and Charles C. Dolan, a switchman. Their testimony was the same as that given at the coroner's inquest, that Curry shot Jackson twice and that he was falling when the second shot was fired. Both declared that Jackson did not have his hand upraised as if in the act of defending himself

When court adjourned for dinner, the state had nine other witnesses to examine.

Weapon Is Exhibited.

Upper Sandusky, April 27.—[Special.]—Court reopened, at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, with a small crowd in attendance, although the number of spectators gradually increased during the afternoon.

City Engineer George E. Dwyer was called by the state, and examined as to the location of what is known as the "hump," relative to the city of Marion and the cornfield, where the crime was committed. The defendant's attorneys declined to cross-examine the witness. The state then offered as exhibits all of Jackson's clothing worn the day of the crime, two empty shells and three loaded shells and Curry's revolver. At 1:20 o'clock the attorneys for the state announced that they would rest.

By request of the attorneys for the defense the court ordered a recess of ten minutes, that the defendant's counsel might hold a short consultation before presenting their side of the case. Court reopened at 1:50 o'clock, at which time Attorney D. R. Crissinger for the defense, informed the court that he wished to make a motion in the absence of the jury, whereupon the court ordered the jury to retire. Mr. Crissinger then asked that the state be compelled to decide which of the two shots its relied upon to sustain its case.

Prosecutor Justice stated that the state only wished to elect upon the shot that killed. The motion of the defense was overruled, and the jury ordered to return.

E. L. Owen was called as the first witness for the defense. His testimony was unimportant.

J. A. McDowell, a switchman in the Erie yards, was examined by Attorney F. E. Guthery. Witness saw Curry and Jackson holding a conversation in the cornfield, saw Curry pull out a paper supposed to be a warrant. Jackson struck the warrant from Curry's hand and a part of it blew over toward the north, where Jackson stepped over and picked it up. He next heard two shots fired, but could not see Curry, a cornshock obstructing his view. He saw Jackson fall. Mrs. Jackson was about fifteen feet from her husband when he was shot. The state did not cross-examine the witness.

Leo B. Larr, of Huntington, Indiana, testified that, after Curry arrived at the cornfield, some trouble occurred between Jackson and Curry; that Jackson got a corn-cutter and started for Curry, with the cornknife uplifted, when Curry fired the two shots. Jackson fell, and Mrs. Jackson and Curry went to the body, both reaching it about the same time. Curry picked something up and returned to the "hump." Mrs Jackson was about four feet from her husband when the two shots, which were very close together were discharged.

Prosecutor Charles L. Justice in cross-examination was unable to get Larr to stray from his original story, but brought out that the witness had been arrested in Huntington for robbery.

A. J. Sickle, a switchman, saw Curry and Jackson talking and then a skirmish, in which Curry took Jackson by the shoulders and Jackson escaped by slipping out of his coat. He next saw a puff of smoke from Curry's revolver, after which Curry returned to the "hump," at which time he told the witness to go over and see what he could do for Jackson, that he had to shoot him. Judge Babst ordered the declaration of Curry to the witness, "I had to shoot him," not to be considered by the jury

John T Coffet, another witness in the Erie yards in Marion testified that he saw Jackson run to a nearby cornshock and secure a cornknife He then advanced toward Curry with the cornknife held upright in his right hand. Jackson approached to within about sixteen feet of Curry in this manner Curry reached in his right-hand hippocket and removed his handkerchief placing it in his left hand, and then returned to the same pocket with his right hand and drew out the revolver, fired, and Jackson fell Curry according to Coffey, then approached near Jackson and secured the cornknife and returned to the "hump." Curry told the witness to telephone for the ambulance which he did He also asked that the switchman and engine crew take Jackson to the hospital as quickly as possible as he was badly injured Coffey told his story in a cool and deliberate manner, and although severely cross-examined by Attorney G. B. Seofield, at no time did he become in the least excited or confused, telling exactly the same story that he related on direct examination.

As it was found impossible to find some of the other witnesses for the defense at 4 o'clock, court adjourned until 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The defense expects to introduce all its testimony by tonight. Wednesday may be consumed in rebuttal The case will be submitted to the jury by Thursday.

The testimony of this morning's session was that of character witnesses, all of whom testified as to the good reputation of the defendant John Garner, of Winchester, Kentucky, Curry's former home, testified that he had known the prisoner a number of years. For twelve years, the witness said he had been mayor of Winchester and that he is now a member of the state board of equalization Other character witnesses for the defense were John DeWitte, Joseph Harrigan, V B Rule and John T Coffey of Cincinnati, Captain William P Myers of Norwich, which is a small town near Cincinnati, C E Strong, W W Sanders, J M Davidson Richard Burke, T J Osborne and George McKinley

John W Reading testified that Curry came to his father's grocery and used the telephone to summon himself up, and Constable I W Ulsh testified that Curry rode with him to the office of Justice Charles E Gompf Edward L Gray a farmer, was with Ulsh at the time

An Injunction.

Notice has been received of an injunction restraining the Marion county commissioners from selling the McKibben ditch in Richland township The ditch is a joint county ditch, and the injunction was obtained by Prosecuting Attorney Williamson, of Morrow county.

That's why we could not dispose of all of the fine "Buck" Stoves—when we sold out the C. W. McClain store last December.

We knew you would be more interested in getting a new kitchen stove about this time of the year—so we have held back until now to offer you the greatest stove bargains in years,

We don't want Stoves (even though they are the best on earth.)

We never did want them—but had to take them along with the balance of the McClain stocks—if we were to get back into the Dry Goods business.

Now they take up valuable room in our basement—and we are about the most anxious people to get rid of them that you ever saw.

And it pays "to buy when the other fellow wants to sell"—you know.

We are willing to pay you for taking these fifty some odd Cook Stoves and Ranges "off our hands."

We will pay you with what are probably the "greatest savings on perfect, new stoves—that any Ohio store ever offered." Here's a partial list—

McClain's $30 to $65 Ranges $19.95 to $42.75

McClain's $30 "Matchless" Steel Range now $19.95
McClain's $45 Buck Ranges now $29.83 & $32.75
McClain's $50 "Royal Gem" Steel Range $30 75
McClain's $50 Buck Ranges are now $37.60
McClain's $55 Buck Ranges are now $39.80
McClain's $65 Buck Ranges are now $42.75

McClain's $20 to $40 Cook Stoves $12.75 to $24.75

McClain's $20 Buck Cook Stoves now $12.75
McClain's $27.50 Buck Cook Stoves now $17.65
McClain's $32 Buck Cook Stoves now $18.75
McClain's $40 Buck Stoves now $24.75

"Buck" Stoves

will last a lifetime,

—and give you absolutely perfect, satisfactory service.

The "Buck" guarantee is the strongest given on any stove. But my! the stove itself is so perfectly and honestly constructed—the materials that enter it so "true by test"—that a purchaser never has to fall back upon his guarantee.

Then it behooves the person who wants a new Range or Cook Stove—to grasp this opportunity.

For the chance to get a "Buck"—at prices so greatly reduced—positively will not occur again.

Mrs E L Everett of No 519 Main street celebrated the eighty sixth anniversary of her birth Thursday afternoon, April 22

It has been customary for a decade or more for her children and relatives to make the day one of special gladness to the mother's heart so Thursday all her children save one son L R who lives at Huntington West Virginia and her son in law Mr Davis also two grandchildren and two great grandchildren with nephews and nieces met at her home to congratulate her upon arriving at another mile stone upon life's journey

A bountiful dinner was served from 1 to 6 o'clock and after this visiting was enjoyed until about 8 o'clock when speeches and reminiscences were enjoyed for a time W H Everett presided during this session

Rev George F Rummel her pastor was called upon first and he spoke of the courage faith and hope of the pioneer and of the debt of gratitude that the present generation is under to the men and women who made the wilderness blossom as a rose In his talk G I Everett said that of the first cousins by blood only the Everetts had a parent living Mrs Harry S Nichols a granddaughter spoke of the absent ones and congratulated her aged grandparent upon reaching her present age W B Everett said he believed these birthday gatherings helped to keep the mother alive from year to year

The last but not least on the program was Mrs Everett Her address which is printed below in full shows how well her faculties are preserved

Mrs Everett is looking forward to her best days when she is to be in the world to come and whither she is fast listening to see the Lord who saves her

One of the happy features of the day was a postcard shower given by the ladies of the Free Baptist church and others who could not be at the gathering

Mrs Everett contributed the following

Well my friends As I have left another mile stone of my life behind and have the pleasure of again meeting you on this occasion I surely ought to be thankful and do feel highly honored

The seasons come and go the spring time comes with its grass and budding flowers and green foliage with birds singing in the branches so happily But soon autumn comes creeping along and all too soon the flowers begin to wither the grass is touched with the cold breath of frost the trees having done their duty take on gold and purple preparing for the great change Soon comes December with cold storms and freezing nights and snow that covers all the beauties of the fall Yet these changes are so silent and so constant that we scarcely notice them and before we are aware the seasons are gone and we look back at the shortness of time

So it is with our lives youth middle age then the frost of winter of old age which creeps on so surely but so soon In looking back it seems but a few years when I at the age of eleven came with my parent from the state of New York and settled in Marion county in the fall of 18 4 My memory takes me back to those pioneer days and the hardships of seventy five years ago of sickness and death of burying a dear mother In those days of privation all dry goods were very high and no market near for produce Wheat had to be hauled to Sandusky City and brought but fifty cents a bushel it taking three days for the trip Every letter we sent to our friends cost twenty-five cents Such was some of my experience of the early days of my youth but then were happy schooldays never giving a thought that they were passing away never a thought that I could possibly get old Youth and pleasure with plenty of work I was always cheerful and happy But time went on I did not heed I would always be young of course and springtime of life was so sweet But school days passed and circumstances changed my course

I found myself settled in life with a small family yet not old No crow had done his work in my face For years I lived in the dear old homestead where for fifty six years I was a happy mother where love reigned and reigned But still put old age off I would not be called old woman for a long time but youth yielded to the ravages of time

I have lived to bury many friends and have many still living friends of other day which could name by the score Oh how I love to meet the dear old acquaintances in where we used to meet at church where the hand shaking and Christian fellowship made us light put these meetings of long ago are printed on memory's page and it was a sorrowful pleasant thought

Life has its beauties but time shrouds them Death's grave has honors are but the sunshine of a home its palace a but is gilded sepulchres Not so with eternity In the dwelling of the Almighty there be no footsteps of decay no darkness nor pain there in that beautiful home I soon expect to enter and claim the promise He that believeth on me shall have everlasting life

And now as I have lived and tried to do every known duty in living to make others happy and also aiming to do Gods will I am waiting to hear Thy will be done enter in to the glory of the Lord

HOTEL STEWARD STARVES TO DEATH

Dies for Lack of Food Amid an Abundance.

Akron, O., April 26.—Steward of a local hotel and surrounded by food, William M. Andrews starved to death today because on account of stomach trouble he was unable to eat. He was found dead in his room, beside him was this note:

"I am dying inch by inch, starving to death. I have not eaten a whole egg in a week."

For many years Andrews was a minister of the Reformed church. He gave up preaching nine years ago.

OLD POLITICAL FEUD IS FATAL

Rivals in Mississippi Village Settle Differences with Guns.

Meadville, Miss., April 27.—Cornelius Mitchell is dead and three other persons are wounded as a result of a six-handed shooting affray, the outgrowth of a political feud.

At a recent election Dr. A. M. Newman, formerly sheriff of this county, defeated the father of the young man killed in the contest for the office of chancery clerk. Feeling between the two factions became intense, and when Pritchard met Newman, weapons were quickly drawn and the firing began. Ingraham Pritchard came to the aid of his brother and three sons of Dr. Newman came to his assistance.

TAFT AT BIG GRANT DAY CELEBRATION

General's Son Is Also Guest of Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, April 27.— President Taft and members of his cabinet, with other well-known Americans, will be the guests tonight of the Union league at the annual celebration of Grant's birthday by the league. General Grant was born 87 years ago at Point Pleasant, O.

President Taft was met at the railroad station by the First City troop, Philadelphia's ancient organization, which claims the honor of escorting the city's distinguished guests. His progress through the city was marked by cheers. He was accompanied by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and Postmaster General Hitchcock.

Among the other guests at tonight's banquet will be General Frederick Dent Grant, son of the general. Vice President Sherman was expected, but an engagement to speak at the Grant day celebration in Brooklyn will prevent his attendance.

Tonight's banquet will surpass in brilliance any ever given by the league. The last time a president and cabinet members were guests of the league was during the McKinley administration. During President Taft's stay at the league the city will be notified of his presence by the flying of the presidential flag from the league staff.

SIXTEEN PERSONS HURT IN TORNADO

Many Buildings in Oklahoma Community Wrecked.

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 27.—Sixteen persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, in a tornado which destroyed a large part of the town of Centrahoma, near here. A child of Rev. E. J. Matthews is thought to be dying. Mrs. Matthews and her four other children also were injured.

Not a building in the town remained wholly intact after the storm. Twelve buildings, including the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches, were wrecked. The town contains about 500 inhabitants. Many of these are homeless as a result of the storm.

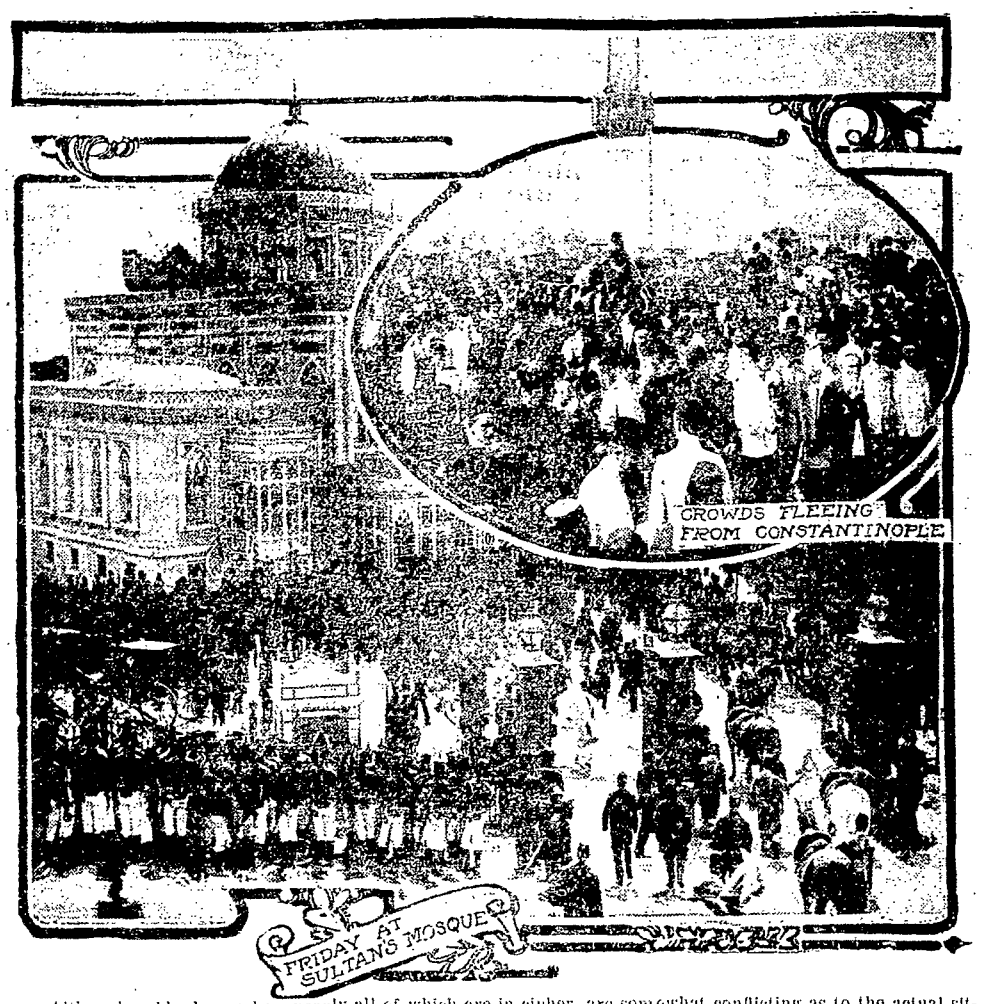
MOSQUE WHERE SULTAN WORSHIPS; CHAOTIC SCENE IN TURKISH CAPITAL



Although cable despatches, nearly all of which are in cipher, are somewhat conflicting as to the actual situation in the beleaguered capital of Turkey, it is generally believed that the bloody reign of the sultan, Abdul Hamid II., is drawing to a tragic close. "Give us the old man's head!" was the cry set up by the troops of the Third army corps when they set out from Saloniki for Constantinople, and the news of their approach struck terror to the heart of the tyrant ruler. The imperial yacht is ready, in command of Admiral Bucknam and Captain Ledbetter, the sultan's two American officers, to take him from the capital. Where he will go is a matter of conjecture. Since the reactionary revolution, set afoot by his own treachery, he has been shut up in the Yildiz kiosk, pleading for a compromise with the Liberals at one moment and begging his few faithful officers to resist the approach of the rebels at the next. The United States cruisers, North Carolina and Montana, are hurrying to Constantinople to protect American interests there.

CAPTAIN HAINS AS HE APPEARS NOW, HIS WIFE, JUDGE AND PLACE OF TRIAL

John F. McIntyre, chief counsel for Captain Peter C. Hains, the artillery officer on trial for the murder of William E. Annis, the alleged despoiler of his home, in outlining Hains' defense, made temporary insanity the keynote of the plea. It is contended that Captain Hains has on more than one occasion given evidence of an unsound mind when laboring under excitement. Numerous witnesses will testify to his strange conduct on these occasions. Alienists who have observed the defendant closely since he has been in jail will be placed on the stand to prove that he has frequently acted in an irrational manner during that time. If the jury finds that Hains was insane at the time of the tragedy and is now sane he will go free, but if he is found to be insane at the present time he likely will be sent to Matteawaa, where Harry Thaw is incarcerated. The United States has taken no cognizance of Hains' trial and will do nothing to affect his standing in the army until after the state has disposed of the charge against him. The accompanying picture of Hains shows him with a beard, which he has grown since he has been in jail.

TO INCREASE HEAD TAX ON IMMIGRANTS

Plan Proposed to Produce More Revenue.

Washington, April 27.—An increase to $12 in the head tax on immigrants has been proposed by Overman, Democrat, of North Carolina, as an amendment to the tariff bill in the senate. He said it would produce from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000 annually, and would protect American labor. Each immigrant now entering the country pays a tax of four dollars.

CATHEDRAL SHAKEN BY BOMB EXPLOSION

New Orleans Police Unable To Explain Mystery.

New Orleans, April 26. — The famous old St. Louis cathedral in Chartres street was shaken by an explosion, believed to have resulted from the placing of a bomb in the south tower of the building. The explosion, heard for many blocks and creating wild excitement in that section of the city, occurred when the church was practically empty of worshipers. A priest, a woman and a child were the only occupants of the building at the time, and none was injured.

One of the smaller altars in the front of the church was wrecked, handsome glass windows were broken and a quantity of plastering dislodged. The damage amounts to about $2,000.

The police express the belief that dissensions among some of a party of Italian workmen engaged in making repairs in the south tower of the church was responsible for the explosion. It is claimed that a charge of dynamite or some other high explosive was placed where it was thought it would send into eternity certain workmen against whom the enmity of the perpetrators existed, and that a miscalculation as to the time of the explosion was made.

In California one rarely sees a bank note. The money in circulation is all gold and silver. It is common to see a collector walking along the street with a bag of gold on his back. Curiously, the very weight of the money one person can hardly carry more than $10,000 in gold—often acts as a deterrent feature in embezzlement.

The Aso and Aoya are on a peaceful visit of some weeks' duration, which will take them to all of the principal ports on the Pacific coast. The two ships are prizes of the Russo-Japanese war.

Rome, April 26.—Wilbur Wright today gave exhibition of his aeroplane in which he refrained from the use of the starting rails. Starting his motors as usual he maneuvered the aeroplane for about 150 yards along the ground and then shot it up into the air without apparent difficulty or accident.

PREPARING FOR A GREAT STRIKE

IT IS BUT A DAY OR TWO IN FUTURE

President Clemenceau Has Intimated That He Will Fight the Demands of the Unionists—Ten Thousand Men and Women, Carrier Pigeons and Wireless Instruments Ready To Go to Work.

Paris, May 5.—The headquarters of the general labor confederation unofficially stated today that a general strike throughout the whole republic is a question of only a few days if the government continues its suspension of government employes to then participation in the general movement toward unionism.

The declaration of the strike will depend largely upon the answer that Premier Clemenceau makes to the delegation from the labor confederation that will demand of him the restoration of the suspended employes, a guarantee against future suspensions and the retirement of M. Simyan, under secretary of posts.

Will Fight Demand*.

Clemenceau has intimated that he will fight the demands.

The laborites say that they can call out at the start all the postoffice, telegraph, telephone and railway employes in the country, and can extend the strike until a complete tie-up results.

That the government intends to make a stiff fight against the labor-ites is indicated by the preparations it is making for the hardest fight in the history of the country. It has established an automobile and carrier pigeon post system, and is arranging to use all the French ships for the despatch of wireless messages

Ten thousand men and women are held in readiness by the government to take the place of the strikers.

JORDAN MAY ESCAPE CHAIR

By Measure New to Criminal Jurisprudence.

HIS LOWER SPINE TO BE PUNCTURED

Resort Will Be Had to the Lumbar Puncture—If the Fluid Which the Needle Extracts Shows Insanity Germs, His Conviction of the Premeditated Murder of His Wife Will Go for Naught.

Boston, May 6.—By a measure absolutely new in criminal history, Chester S. Jordan, convicted of the premeditated murder of his wife, Honora, may escape the chair. The evidence of insanity needed is to be drawn from the spine by what is known as the lumbar puncture. If paresis germs are discernible in his spinal fluid when under a microscope he probably will escape the deadly electrodes. If his spinal fluid is healthy, he will probably die in the chair.

The celebrated neurologists who are to perform this remarkable operation are Dr. Frank W Page of Boston, and Dr. William H. McIlvaine, jr., of Providence.

The lumbar puncture operation consists of the injection of the hypodermic needle into the lower lumbar vertebrae, the two lower so-called "spools," that make up the spinal column. It is in between these that the spinal fluid is to be found in its greatest quantities. This fluid will be extracted by the hypodermic needle. There will be only a few drops and these will be placed under a powerful microscope. If Jordan is suffering from paresis, if he is subject to epilepsy, the germs will be found in this fluid by means of a microscope and will prove them most valuable evidence possible for Jordan, as well as the most remarkable silent witness ever brought into any court-room as evidence.

Laporte, Ind., May 6.—Burglars early this morning robbed the safe of Charles Somelhorn's sporting goods store at this place and escaped with $1,000 worth of money and goods. Then they stole a valuable race horse, Hummingbird, hitched the animal to the wagonload of loot and departed.

The robbers were traced to a thickly wooded country, seven miles north of this city, where one robber was captured. The stolen property was recovered in full, including the race horse, which Sheriff Anslos drove to this city with his handcuffed prisoner.

PRAYS FOR DIVORCE AFTER THIRTY YEARS

Mrs. Wallace McBride Begins a Proceeding.

After a married life of thirty years, Laura C. McBride, through Attorney H. Edmund Hill, brought an action for divorce from Wallace McBride, April 23, in the common pleas court. Three children were born to them.

The plaintiff charges that for the past twelve years the defendant has failed to provide for the plaintiff and his children, and during that time he has squandered a small fortune which he inherited.

In the suit of Benjamin F. Adams against Tod Boyd and others, the defendant, through Attorney L. E. Myers, has filed a motion in the common pleas court asking the court to require the plaintiff to make his petition more definite and certain, to set forth the neglect on the part of the defendant in causing a wall to fall. The plaintiff sues to recover $19.15 damages as a result of the toppling of a stone wall.

A proceeding for temporary and permanent allmony was begun by Estelle K. Wilson against Earle R. Wilson, April 23, in the common pleas court, through Attorneys Harry N. Quigley and Mouser & Mouser. The plaintiff sets up that she was married to the defendant, February 21, 1905, and that she was wilfully and heartlessly abandoned, without cause or justification, January 14, 1907. Since the date of his departure she says the defendant has failed to provide for her in any way.

The petition relates that at one time the defendant was the owner of real estate reasonably worth $5,000 in Marion, and that this was sold at the direction of the court to apply to their payments but plains

JAMES BOYLE FOUND GUILTY

Jury Returns Verdict in the Kidnaping Trial.

ENTIRE CASE IS QUICKLY HANDLED

Story Told by Billy Whitla, the Kidnaped Boy, Is Too Strong To Be Overcome—Boyle Refuses To Plead Guilty and Puts Case Up to Court and Jury—Case of His Companion Called.

Mercer, Pa., May 6.—James H. Boyle was found guilty of kidnaping Billy Whitla, this afternoon, after a trial that occupied only three and a half hours of actual work. The jury was out forty-five minutes.

The penalty is imprisonment from one year to life.

When the court took its noon recess Boyle's attorneys urged him to throw up the game.

Up to the last minute it was believed that Boyle might plead guilty, but Boyle wouldn't listen.

"I won't lie down," Boyle told them. "If I go to the penitentiary, I go fighting."

"Yes."

Sees Billy in Buggy.

Verne Smith, of Sharon, told of seeing Billy Whitla in a buggy with a man the morning Billy was kidnaped. He recognized the man as Boyle, whom he had seen a few days before. He said he had known Boyle when he lived in Sharon twelve years before.

"I wasn't positive of the identification that day because of the black mustache," said Smith. "When Boyle was brought back to Sharon under arrest, I made certain.

Smith was asked on cross-examination why he didn't notify Mr. Whitla. He said it was because he didn't want to mix up in it.

"You know," Smith was asked, "how worried Billy Whitla's parents were and you told them nothing."

"I kept quiet," said Smith.

Identified by Mom.

Abner Hancock, a barber at Silles, Ohio, told of shaving Boyle the day of the kidnaping while Billy sat in a chair and watched him.

Boyle listened coolly enough until John Beatty, a railroad detective, was asked to identify him. Then he jumped up and told his attorneys

A SCORCHING ARRAIGNMENT

Cummins, of Iowa, Denounces the Payne Bill.

FOLLOWS LEAD OF COLLEAGUE

Gives Warning to Members of His Party.

It Is Not the Manufacturers, the Lumber, Coal, Iron, Woolen or Pill Men Who Demand a Change, but Those Who Are Bearing the Burdens Caused by Schedules of Present Measure.

Washington, May 6.—A scorching arraignment of the Aldrich tariff bill was delivered in the senate today by Senator Cummins, of Iowa, whose colleague, Dolliver, also has been roasting the measure.

"This bill of the senate finance committee will not be accepted by those who have favored a revision of the tariff," said Cummins, "as either a fulfillment of the party pledge, or as a settlement of the controversy. If this bill, or anything substantially like it, becomes a law, I predict that a campaign for lower duties will begin the moment the extraordinary session of congress adjourns and will continue with increasing zeal, until the judgment entered in the court of the public conscience is also entered in the journals of congress. It gives me no pleasure to utter this prophesy, for I have earnestly hoped that the revision now in progress would end

Little Damage by Sandstorm at Ardmore, Oklahoma.

Fort Worth, Texas, May 6.—Reports of a damaging storm at Ardmore, Oklahoma, are unfounded. A despatch from Ardmore says that a heavy sandstorm swept across the city early today. A high wind prevailed and telegraph and telephone wires are out of commission to the north. Wires south, however, are working. Only slight damage was done.

FUNERAL STOPPED BY UNION AGENT

Because Three Drivers Are Not Members of Union.

Chicago, May 6.—John Butler, business agent of the cab drivers' union, Wednesday stopped the funeral of Mrs. Katherine Smith, because three of the carriage drivers, he alleged, were not members of the union. Butler is declared to have gone to the Smith residence and ordered the driver of the hearse, who was a union man, not to take the casket from the house, until union men had been supplied for all the carriages. When police were called, Butler compromised by letting the funeral proceed to the church, where the non-union drivers were sent back to the barn and union men secured.

PRINCIPLES EXPOUNDED

THE NATION MUST BE JUST AND TRUE

People Must Be Just to Others and True to Themselves.

Nothing Should Be Done That Is Against Healthy Life of the Country, Even at the Risk of a Possible Clash—Respect for Japanese, but No Desire That They Settle Here in Mass.

New York, May 6.—In the current number of the Outlook, out today, Editor Theodore Roosevelt discusses the Japanese situation as it affects the western states. His editorial in part follows:

"There are certain elementary principles all of which should be kept in view if a nation wishes to act justly both by itself and others. It must insist upon what is necessary for its own healthy life, and this even at the cost of a possible clash; but this insistence upon what is due to itself should always be accompanied by all possible courtesy to and fair dealing with others.

"These are the principles upon which the people of the United States should act as regards the question of immigration of the Japanese into this country. The Japanese are a highly civilized people of

Policy of Good Will.

"The fact that all really patriotic and far-sighted Americans insist that, hand in hand with a policy of good will toward foreign nations, should go the policy of upbuilding of our navy is often interpreted by well meaning but short-sighted men as being a threat towards other nations, or as being provocative of war. Of the two assumptions the first is utterly unwarranted and the second the strict reverse of the truth. We have the right to say, for instance, what immigrants should come to our own shores but we are powerless to enforce this right against any nation that chooses to disregard our wishes, unless we continue to build up and maintain a first-class fighting navy * * * * *.

"We Americans are ourselves proud and high spirited, and we are not always by any means far-sighted. If our honor or our interests were menaced by a foreign power, this nation would fight, wholly without regard to whether or not its own was efficient. In the event of a crisis arising, the peace advocates who object to our building up the navy would be absolutely powerless to prevent this country going to war. A strong navy is the surest guarantee of peace that America can have, and the cheapest insurance against

Behind Plan To Exclude Wright Airship.

BRITISH INVENTORS EXERCISING A PULL.

To Keep War Office from Buying Machines.

These Inventors Argue That the British Machines Now in Process of Manufacture Are of Such a Character That It Will Be but a Question of Time Till They Surpass Wright Machine.

London, May 6.—It is stated on the highest semi-official authority that the British government not only has not made, but does not intend to make, any move to purchase the absolute right to the Wright aeroplane patents in Great Britain. And there hangs a peculiar reason. National jealousy is back of the plan to keep the American invented airship out of the country despite the admitted fact that Great Britain is far behind the other nations in its fight to conquer the air.

British inventors with a war office pull have convinced the government that, although the Wright machine is today far ahead of anything else now on the market, yet there are essential crudities in it which have not been overcome which rob it of effectiveness.

These inventors argue that the British machines now in process of

To Be Made by United States Steel Company.

THAT'S OPINION IN BUSINESS WORLD

Quarterly Report Just Made Tells Its Own Story.

Despite the Cry of Hard Times Made by the Officers of the Company and the Cut in Prices, the First Report of the Year Shows a Business Condition Satisfactory to the Directorate.

New York, April 28.—Business and speculative circles are a unit today in believing that there will be no reduction in wages by the United States steel corporation, and Wall street today generally attributes to the giant combine a distinct victory over the opposition, inasmuch as most of the independent have reduced wages, while the big company has not. As a result they say the steel corporation has disarmed criticism by many of those politicians who have opposed the merger of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company and placed itself in position where it is stronger than ever with the speculative public and Americans generally.

The quarterly report as it is studied tells its own story and shows that the United States Steel corporation common and preferred stocks are probably on a permanent dividend paying basis. Despite the cry of officials of the company that times were bad and the sharp cut in prices to "meet the action of the independents in underbidding us," as Judge Gary put it, the earnings for the first quarter of this year were eminently satisfactory to the directors.

And on the very eve of the meeting the biggest of the steel companies that are controlled by the trust—the Carnegie Steel company—calmly puts up its prices and explains that this action is due entirely to the "enormous number of orders on our books." And this action, according to report, forecasts a return to the old prices for steel on many products. Steel nails were never cut, even nominally for market purposes and the products that were cut were the articles that the independents had had a monopoly on the market for some time.

If the Wall street experts are to be believed, the United States Steel company has corralled most of the open orders for steel and steel products that have been on the market for the last ninety days and have enough future contracts booked to ensure an increased business in all mills until late in the coming fall.

And most of these orders were booked at prices that mean substantial profits for the trust according to the belief here.

One reason assigned for the general optimism of the steel manufacturers here is that they have received assurances from Washington that the senate schedules will be the ones finally adopted in the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

Follow Steel Lead.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 28.—It is officially announced that the Jones & Laughlin company has followed the lead of the United States Steel corporation and advanced the price of steel bars and plates.

WORD FOR FAT MEN.

For the past 1900 years the relative popularity and efficiency of fat men have been mooted questions. Two of the most distinguished citizens of that rather extensive period have arrayed themselves on opposite sides of the question. Julius Caesar declared, at least in the hearing of William Shakespeare, that he preferred to have about him "fat men, sleek-headed and such as sleep o' nights." On the other hand, Edmund Day, who has given to the world a couple of the most delightful fat men in all dramatic literature, declares: "Shucks." Nobody loves a fat man." Only he didn't say "shucks."

To the literatuge of this all-absorbing question a Philadelphia contemporary contributes the suggestion that Mr. Taft has established for all time in American history the fat man as an institution entitled to public esteem. He is walking in neither [illegible] dalgias nor in mental poise. He is thralled only in regard to the size of his hat. He is technically obese—not belligerent either mentally or physically. Some one remarked long ago that in some fat men the fat predominates and in others the men predominate. In Mr. Taft it is the man. The future political fashion historian will probably note that during the closing years of the first decade and the early years of the second of the twentieth century the Americans wore their big men large.

Mr. Taft discounts the efficiency of the "lean and hungry Cassius" whom Caesar disliked and he disproves Mr. Day's pessimistic despair as to the possible degree of public confidence and esteem which a fat man may attain. This is at least keeping up with the procession in these days of historical iconoclasm, if nothing more. May not the fat man after all be the victim of circumstances? Is thinness a condition precedent to the possession of lovable qualities or the accumulation of kindly wishes on the part of one's fellow citizens? There is much to be said in favor of the fat man, even if Falstaff and Henry VIII were inclined to embonpoint.—Kansas City Journal

REGULATING PEDESTRIANS.

The rules of the road are so much a matter of course that one hardly thinks of their existence. Every driver knows them and realizes as well that to break them they will not only be punished but that the breaking usually brings its own punishment. We have laws regulating automobiles, and the street commissioners are trying to help street traffic by a set of new regulations. But who will regulate the pedestrian? Now the majority of city dwellers are afoot while they are in the street; for one person in a carriage there are a hundred on the sidewalk.

And how many pedestrians are there who observe the rules of the road? As for offenders, there is the woman whom the attractions of the show window draw to the wrong side of the walk; the man who has an idea the suddenness of whose coming brings him to a standstill; the umbrella or parasol carrier who holds that dangerous weapon under the arm; the gossips who stand in the middle of a crowded sidewalk when a doorway or a side street would do as well; most exasperating of all, the man who turns to fling a last word to a friend who has passed and drifts across the sidewalk with eyes behind him. This last it is impossible to avoid; you may dance from side to side, but he is sure to get you. One such offender obstructs the dozens who are behind him in a hurry, for we are all in a hurry, whether the hurry is unnecessary or not. A traffic squad empowered to arrest all pedestrian violators of the rules of the road would be the busiest body of police the city ever saw.—Boston Globe.

LOAFERS.

Why is a loafer, anyway? If the loafer at the very best does no good for himself he certainly harms those with whom he comes in contact. We have frequently heard the remark that there is but fifteen cents difference between the man who works and the man who doesn't, and that the latter has it. When particularly the young men of a town see a loafer who somehow manages to get along on no income, they are inclined to believe that the world owes them a living also and work becomes objectionable to them, when it should be a pleasure. We have too much patience with loafers. We should learn from the bee, which, when it can secure conclusive evidence against the drone, drives him out. A loafer is a vagrant. He ought to be treated as such unless he can be compelled to go to work. In Leavenworth, for instance, there are loafers, and this in spite of the fact that there is an abundance of employment here. If under these circumstances these loafers refuse to work, they should be compelled to get out of town or stay at home, where they could not exert a bad influence upon others by their idleness.—Leavenworth Times.

WRIGHT BROTHERS WILL NOT EXHIBIT

Refuse the Offer of State Board of Agriculture.

Columbus, April 28.—The Wright brothers will not exhibit their aeroplane at the state fair. The state board of agriculture which was willing to pay them $10,000 to do so received a letter Monday from a brother of the inventors stating that they would fulfill their contract with the government for a demonstration at Fort Myer, after which they would return to Europe and that they would not contract to make any public flights in this country this year. The brothers are working on improvements on the machine and do not wish to devote time to anything else for a year or more.

People are naturally so honest that they seldom think they have to live up to it.

AGAIN KIDNAP BILLY WHITLA

Unless the Lad's Father Pays Over $10,000,

WILL AN ALLEGED BLACKHAND GANG

Two Men Are Arrested in the City of Boston.

One Calls for Letter in Answer to That in Which Demand for the Money Is Made—He Is Nabbed by the Police and a Second Man, Who Comes with Him, Is Taken at the Postoffice Door.

Boston, Mass., April 28.—Charged with threatening to again kidnap Billy Whitla of Sharon, Pennsylvania, unless his father sent $10,000 to Boston, two men are today under arrest in this city. They are John W. Wright, thirty-nine, of Boston, Ernest H. Martin, thirty-six, of Dorchester.

Some days since, James Whitla, of Sharon, Pennsylvania, received a letter signed "Arthur Howard Brown" which had been mailed in Boston. It read:

"Dear sir: Our society not having received money for return of boy, voted to send the four men that had charge of all arrangements of getting boy and take him again in the night. This may mean death to the boy, so it was voted to give you a chance to pay money. The Black Hand, on receiving same, will not trouble you. We are not interested in the Boyles, who were just tools for our men. Send $1,000 in $50 bills and $9,000 in $1,000 bills. Send it in three lots. Have it here Monday morning. No trickery or it will go hard with the boy. When taken will send men of steel for the latter. Send money to Arthur Howard Brown, post station A, Boston, Massachusetts."

Upon receipt of the letter, Whitla turned it over to the federal authorities. He was told to answer. At station A here, Wright presented an order signed "Arthur Howard Brown" for the letter and was nabbed by federal detectives. Martin was caught at the postoffice door.

Wright denies having anything to do with the matter, saying that he was promised five dollars by an unknown man to get the letter addressed to Brown. His story is not believed by the police.

Owing to the probable difficulty of conviction on the charge of blackmail, the Boston police today turned Wright and Martin over to the federal authorities, who will prosecute on the charge of illegal use of the mails. The men will be arraigned this afternoon before United States Commissioner Hayes.

GOVERNOR OF STATE AND FORMER BOSS

Is Not Recognized by Chief Clerk Kirtley.

Columbus, April 28.—Yesterday, a tall, well-built and prosperous-looking gentleman entered the office of the attorney general and stated that he would like to see General Denman at once. "I am very sorry, but he is very busy and cannot be disturbed now," said Chief Clerk R. H. Kirtley. "What is your name, sir," asked the affable chief clerk. "My name is Harmon," was the reply. It then dawned upon Kirtley that his visitor was none other than the chief executive of the state. Kirtley's face turned fifty-seven different kinds of colors. As soon as he pulled himself together he ushered the governor into General Denman's private office. Before being appointed to his position last January, Kirtley was employed in the legal department of the C. H. & D. railroad, of which Judson Harmon has been receiver for several years. Kirtley neither knew his governor nor former employer.

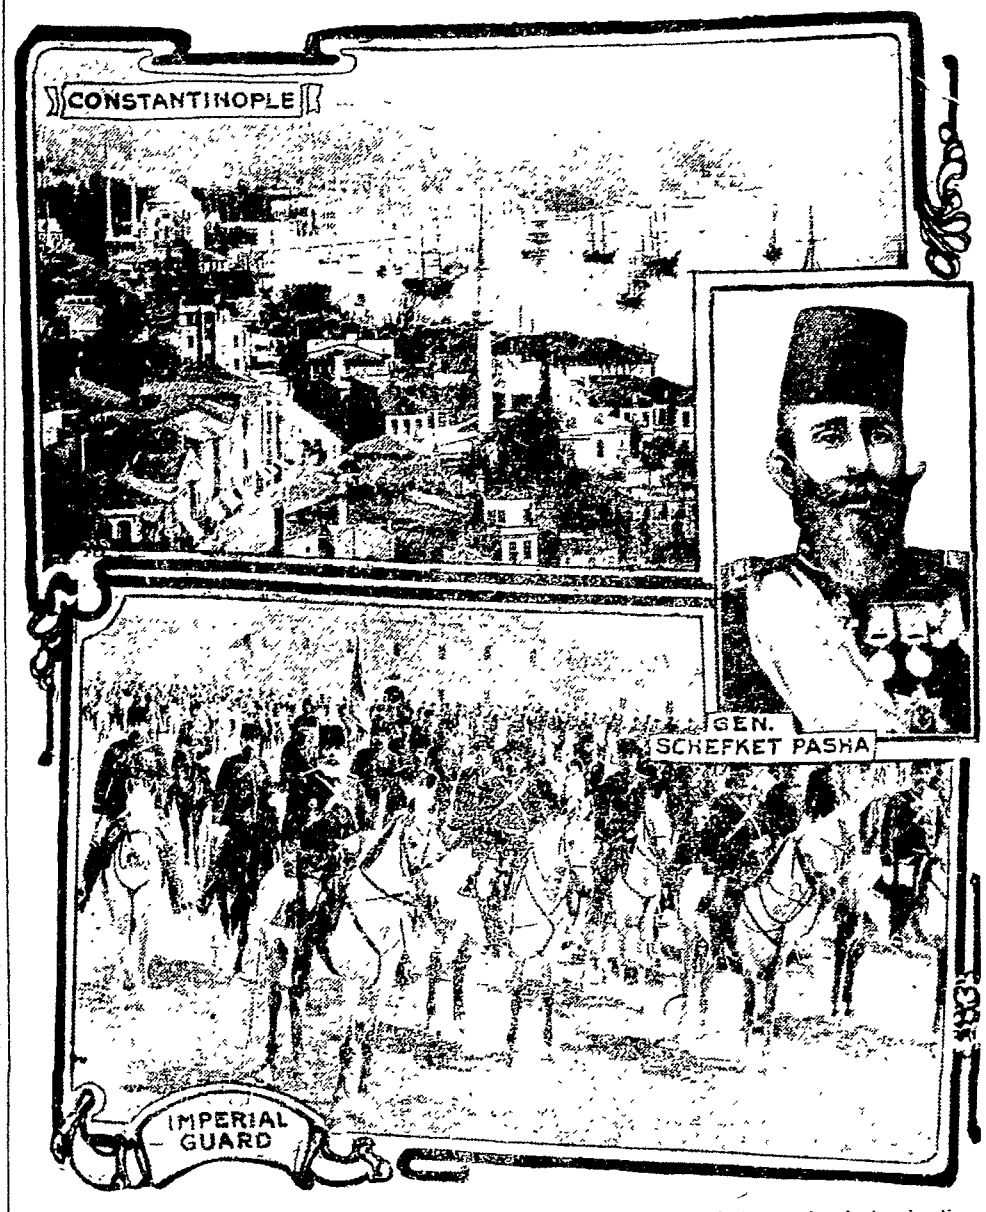
A HIGHWAYMAN SHOT TO DEATH

And an Officer Fatally Wounded at Logansport.

Logansport, Ind., April 28.—Officer Joseph Kruger was fatally wounded and one highwayman was killed in a desperate battle this morning between Officers Kruger and Burke and two highwaymen. The highwaymen had just held up and robbed five well-known citizens whom they met on the principal street just before daylight.

The men were overtaken within two blocks from the scene. Then reply was a bullet which fatally wounded Kruger. The latter fired as he fell and killed one of the men, while the other escaped. A general alarm brought policemen and citizens in automobiles in the chase and the second man was caught north of town later in the morning.

NEW SULTAN'S GUARD, VIEW OF CAPITAL AND GENERAL WHO LED INVADING ARMY



Americans, Englishmen and Frenchmen who witnessed the occupation of Constantinople by the Young Turk army in command of General Schefket Pasha were amazed at the coolness and order of the triumphant troops. Detachments were sent to the embassies and to guard the property of foreigners, and everywhere the officers of the invading army were assuring the people that they were in no danger. General Schefket Pasha gave to Enver Bey the credit of having worked out the plan of capturing the city and when the volunteer troops caught sight of Enver Bey they broke ranks surrounded him and cheered wildly. The invaders at once began the task of burying the dead, employing tram cars to transport the hundreds of mangled bodies to the cemetery. The slaughter was greatest around the Yildiz kiosk, where the former sultan's guard fought with marvelous desperation.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTER

PRESIDENT AT GRANT BANQUET

HE REPRESENTS GENIUS OF WAR

Grant Had Understanding of the Situation.

Realized That There Could Be No Lasting Peace Till the South Was Whipped To Stay Whipped—Refers to Lee's Far-Sighted Patriotism in Bringing Long Struggle to Close.

Philadelphia, April 28.—As the principal speaker at the Grant birthday dinner given by the Union league in this city, President Taft paid a glowing tribute to the soldier-president.

A year ago Mr. Taft was sharply criticised because of certain of his references to General Grant, and he took advantage of the opportunity to express anew his admiration for General Grant as a man, as a soldier and as chief executive of the United States.

General Horace Porter of New York and President James F. Hope of the Union league were among the speakers who preceded President Taft. The latter, following his almost invariable custom, spoke extemporaneously.

Mr. Taft spoke at times in a half-quizzical manner, and there was frequent laughter as well as applause at his reference to political conditions in the south.

After making complimentary references to the Union league's patriotic support of the Union army at the outbreak of the war and during its continuance, Mr. Taft said, among other things:

"It is peculiarly fitting that this club each year should celebrate the birthday of that man who was then coming into prominence, and upon whom hung, it would seem, the whole destinies of this nation.

Praises Military Genius.

"It is not for me, in the presence of gentlemen who knew him, who served with him, who ran the risk of life and death with him, to descant upon his life, his peculiar virtues, or at length to attempt to picture his character to this company; but there are certain things with respect to General Grant that today come back with reference to our passing life. They said that Grant had not the military genius that other generals displayed in the war. To my mind his mind and brain represented the very genius of the war to suppress the rebellion, because it was his mind that grasped the thought that until we had fought it out with our brave opponents and met them in the field and fought them as soldiers, until we convinced them by our strength that the battle was hopeless, we could not expect to have a united country. And therefore, from the time he began in Belmont until he accepted the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, he fought not cities, not points of strategy, but he fought the enemy, and he fought and fought and fought until he wore out the opposition, because only by wearing them out could he hope to bring about the condition in which there should be complete peace.

"What I wished particularly to dwell upon was the spirit of that peace at Appomattox, represented on the one hand by the magnanimity and far-sightedness of Grant, and by the self-restraint and courage and far sighted patriotism (for that it was) on the part of Lee in bringing the struggle to a finish. That spirit at Appomattox is today, I trust, triumphant."

The hard battle won by the merchants of Minnesota in the state legislature which resulted in the passage of new anti-trading stamp legislation, was immediately followed by the assaults of hordes of angry women on the trading stamp stores in St. Paul. The women, holding thousands of stamps, could not be convinced that the stamps were not valueless and it was necessary to call out the police and place guards in charge of the stores for several days to prevent riots and the destruction of the premium stocks of the stores. The new legislation does not prohibit the use of stamps, but provides that no more shall be issued unless their value is plainly printed on their face, and their redemption at their stated value is provided for. Stamps showing a face value of a dollar must be good for a dollar's worth of goods at the stores or the stores will be closed by the authorities. The stamp craze struck St. Paul five or six years ago, and gained a strong foothold. Merchants generally were forced to adopt them because of the action of the principal dealers in making them one of their trade-getting devices. The stamp companies have reaped enormous profits because of the hundreds of thousands of stamps issued which fell into the hands of women who never completed their "books," and therefore never presented them for redemption. Under the system of the stamp companies, each stamp issued was paid for by a merchant before it reached the customer of his store. Unredeemed stamps were therefore clear profit to the companies. The new legislation will practically abolish the business.

ROSS GOES WET BY HEAVY ODDS

STREET FIGHTS ARE NUMEROUS

The Drys Have Much the Better of the Official Side of the Proposition, but in the Matter of Polling Votes They Are Not in the Same Class with the Wets Who Win by a Majority of 1,800.

Chillicothe, O., April 29.—Ross county voted wet by a majority approximating 1,800. The election was characterized by disorderly scenes throughout the day and at times disturbances were in the nature of riots. The fight was the hottest ever witnessed in Ross county, and for a month past both sides had waged an unceasing conflict. The election was held under the Rose county unit law.

Dozens of arrests were made. The police, under orders from Mayor Yaple and the city officials, gathered in the dry workers and the members of Company H, Fourth regiment, O. N. G., sworn in as special deputy sheriffs by Sheriff Swope and Judge John W. Goldberry, gathered in the wets. At one time almost the entire police force was in jail and Chief Prendergast in hiding.

Because the police all appeared in citizens' clothes and were accused of working actively for the wets, Sheriff Swope announced that he was in charge. With the consent of the officers, the entire national guard company stationed here was sworn in as deputies, armed with heavy wagon spokes and revolvers, and sent out on the streets to preserve order.

The guardsmen seemed to take special delight in arresting the police. As soon as the latter made an arrest, a party of guardsmen would grab him and drag him off to the county jail, usually by the heels.

Springfield Takes Last Drink.

Springfield, O., April 29. — Springfield saloons closed their doors at midnight. Thirsty citizens made good use of the last few wet hours the city will know for three years at least, and as a result there were more drunks seen on the street than in any one day for years.

"One thing at least is certain. It was the sugar company that profited by the frauds. The amount realized was sufficient to pay a dividend of nearly six per cent. on the capital stock of the New York company."
